The following is a brief synopsis of Mr. Swindells last sermon preached March 8th, from the Text, I. Thess., v., 23 verse :

reference to St. Paul as an ilenerant minister, but this fact did not prevent him from forming the strongest attach-ment for the several churches he was instrumental in originating, his epistles becoming important testimony upon this point. In these written commu-nications it seems to have been a habit with him of wishing for the very best thing for these churches, the text being an instance. The same sentiment the preacher entertained for the church of Lehighton, and thought that an un folding of the passage quoted would form an appropriate expressions of the kindly feelings he experienced for this charge.

The first idea of the text being a designation of the Divine Being as the "God of peace" was then bri fy elaborated, in the course of which occasion was taken to congratulate the membership on the pleasant, peaceful relations which existed since his association with them. While there had been difference of opinion, it had not led to bitter recri mination and shameful contentions, and for the future of the church he would quote as the expression of his feelings the Psalmist's language "Peace be with-in thy walls," &c. The question was then raised how may this peaceful con-dition be maintained through all the future, which was answered by reference to the broad statement of the text, namely. The experience of the sanctifying grace of the God of peace upon every part of our personality, and preserva-tion in this state until the coming of Christ. Upon this the preacher mainly dwelt, ly dweit, urging upon all the impor-tance of living in the conscious knowledge that they were doing their best to please God. In conclusion the church was reminded of its response binty in relation to the community in which they were living. 'The Sacra-mental service of the Lord's supper was then efficeed upon, the number of commenicants beeing large.

On Sabbath evening we witnessed the last service of Rev. J. T. Swindells, of the M. E. church. True to his sincerity as a christian, he did not indulge in the usual sentimental oratory of a farewell sermon, but very agreeably disappointed the very large audience by giving them a thoroughly practical sermon as his parting advice—both interesting and instructive-that we are certain will prove effective and highly profitable to church and community. Illa stay with us has been but three years, yet in that short time he has indelibly impressed us with his sincerity as a christian, his worth as a gentleman, and his ability as a pastor. His humble unpretending manner, disarmed prejudice; his sincere honest heart, inspired confidence; his loving gentle spirit, won the affections of the people, and his able and fervent preaching, gave him a high place in the estimation of the public. Of his worth as a gentleman, the many warm attachments formed during his residence with us, are the assurances. To his value as a christian, his life and zeal in the cause he assumes testifies. Of his ability as a preacher, the large and discriminating audiences which have attended him are the very best evidences. We regret his loss, but succamb to the necessity, we can only, with

[For THE CARBON ABTOCATE.] Hints to Teachers-How to Most Your Cines. First of all, meet your class regularly.

Let nothing but dire necessity keep you away a single Sabbath ; you know not what you may lose by even one absence. If you must be absent, take pains to secure a substitute who knows something about the class, and will learn something about the lesson. It is of vital importance that you come to your class cheerfully-lightness or anything trif-ing in your bearing, of course, is out of the question; but a melancholy look is worse still. That teacher whose mouth is in shape of a Romanesque arch-who would no more smile than he would burst into a roar of laughter-accomplishes good in spite of a terrible hinderance. Better think of your privileges quite as often as of your responsibility ; one is just as real and just as great as the other-may prove just as healthful a stimulous. Never forget that it is yours to polish gems destined to glisten as crown-jewels in the diadem of the King of Kings. Cultivate the feeling that the Great Teacher, knowing all your needs, loves to bestow that enduement of His spirit which may thoroughly furnish you for your work. And, therefore, always come to your class bathed in the spirit of prayer for grace to help. So coming, cheerfully, give each of your scholars a cordial greeting. Yours should be the warmest salutation they receive outside of their own homes no cided galactic beautiful to allowed to -no gilded saloon should be allowed to rival you in the welcome it can give. Your pupils are not so numerous but that you can call each one "by name, with much of the spirit with which Christ calls his disciples. They are yours. Your cordiality must, by all yours. Your cordiality must, by all means, be genuine—especially with children; shams are utterly useless. They see through all disguises, and read the heart. You must feel a deep interest in every one of them—you can. Calling into exercise that charity which "thinketh no evil;" seeking out what is good in the dept's of their being; re-flecting that each of them is an immortal soul which the Son of God died to save, and has set you to win to Himself. You can care most thoroughly for every individual of their number; you can become to them not merely a magnet drawing the steel to yourself and allow ing those of baser metal to urift away, but a great, warm, human heart, by its glowing sympathy and love, drawing all to you and holding them as surely as the planets are held by the sun.

At a meeting of the officers and teachers of St. John's Lutheran Sunday school, Easton, Penna., held in their school-room, on Wednesday evening, February 18th, 1874, the following resolutions were adopted relative to the death of Henry Hammann:

the memory of Mr. Hammann; that we will strive to emulate the example he has set before us during the twenty-nine years of his connection with our school as its Superintendent, and the two last years as a teacher in the Bible Department, of Ohristain faith, of car-Department, of Ohristain Initia, in Lord nest devotion to the cause of our Lord and Master and of love for the Church
