BEATTY & PLOTTS

The Beatty & Plotts celebrated Golden Tongue

PARLOR ORGAN

is acknowledged by professors of music and celebrated organists to be the leading Parlor Organ now in use. Testimonials and cards of honor are constantly being received in favor of them. We append a few and wish you to read them:—

ANTHONY, N. J., Jan. 25, 1873.

Messrs. Beatty & Plotts, Gents—Your Organ, sold me, gives entire satisfaction. It is beautiful in tone and style of workmanship are seldom if ever surpassed. Wishing you success in your business, I am, with respect,
Prof. M. H. BEATTY.

SHAMOKIN, Pa., Feb. 11, 1874.

I have one of Beatty & Plotts' Golden Tongue Organs. It is an excellent instrument, fine tone and full power. I like it better than any I have heard.

M. H. HARPEL, M. D.

LAURY'S STAT'N, Pa., Jan. 27, 1874.

I have had Beatty & Plotts' Organ since August 14th, 1873; it gives the highest satisfaction, and has proved all that it was recommended by the proprietors.

JOHN HENLY.

SLATINGTON, Pa., Feb. 6, 1874.

Beatty & Plotts' Parlor Organ I like better than the Standard, and it gives better satisfaction, as I find in my travels.

Prof. FR. V. MAYER.

ST. CLAIR, Pa., Dec. 6th, 1873.

Messrs. Beatty & Plotts, Gents—I have received the Organ, as sent by your firm to me, and I have had it examined, and it gives ample satisfaction.

HOB. JOHN SINEY.

MAHANOY CITY, Pa., Oct. 16, 1873.

The Beatty & Plotts celebrated Golden Tongue Parlor Organ is by far the best Parlor Organ in use. I have carefully examined it, and find its tone, workmanship and durability to be the best I ever saw, and I can with pleasure recommend it to any in want of a first-class parlor organ. Prof. O. H. UNGER.

Messrs. Beatty & Plotts, of Washington, N. J., are gentlemen of enterprise, and whose presence would be a credit to any community.—[Hackensack, N. J., Herald, 1872.]

WASHINGTON, N. J., Sept. 5, 1873.

To Robert Morgan, Pottsville—I am happy to state that the instrument gives entire satisfaction, not only to myself but also to the teachers of the Seminary who are better judges.

Rev. A. M. JELLY.

We say, after careful and costly experiment, it is with pleasure we introduce the "Golden Tongue," knowing it possesses many advantages over all others manufactured. The tone excels in fullness, purity, and the thousands of testimonials which are being constantly received, are evidence that our efforts have been eminently successful. ## HOW SHE WON HIM.

"Minnie! Minnie! is my chocolate nearly ready?"

"In one minute, grandamma."

It was scrupulously neat and dainty in all its appointments, the little parlor where Mrs. Breighton sat, although the carpet was a tissue of darns, the furniture faded, and the hearth-rug skillfully eeked out by a slender-throated vase, stood on the antique, claw-legged table, the fender-irons glittered like gold, and the thin muslin curtains, artistically mended here and there, were white as snow; and Mrs. Breighton herself looked like Cinderella's god-mother, in her dress of ancient brocade, best yellow thread lace, and the rings glittering on her small, shriveled hands.

Eighty years old, and a lady to the last! That was something to be proud of.

What though paralysis had robbed her of all use of those dainty-slipped feet—what though the grand house she had entered as a bride was now narrowed down to this one room in a second rate building, where two other families also set up their household altars—she was a lady still, and she could boast that she never had degraded herself to commonplace toil.

"Our means are limited," said old Mrs. Breighton, with the lofty air of a duchess; "but the pension of my son, the colonel—who, as you probably may remember, was killed on the Florida frontier—is sufficient to maintain myself and my two grand-daughters—and we are ladies."

Minnie Breighton presently came in, with her little chocolatiere on a napkin covered tray, and two slices of toast, exquisitely browned and cut as thin as a wafer.

"I hope you haven't been kept waiting, grandamma?" she said.

"My dear"—with an air of mild resignation—"I am accustomed to wait."

"Oh, I am so sorry! But our fire is out, and I had to run in and borrow the use of Mrs. Tucker's stove to boil the chocolate, and—"

Mrs. Breighton contracted her silver brows.

"The Breightons are not a borrowing race, Minnie."

"Shall I get you an egg, grandamma?"

"Not if the fire is out, my dear."

And grandamma Breighton went on with her breakfast, wearing an injured air, while Minnie went back to the other room, where sat her twin sister, cogitating.

Anna Breighton was as pretty as Minnie, but in quite a different style. She was dark, with melting, almond-shaped eyes, an olive skin, and lips like a pomegranate flower, so perfectly shaped, so richly red; Minnie was tall and slender, and fair as a daisy.

Anna laid down a slip of greasy paper as Minnie entered.

"It's the grocer's bill again, sister. What shall we do?"

Minnie sank into a chair.

"And the gas yesterday, and the landlord not paid, and the purse as empty as—Mother Hubbard's cupboard. What shall we do?"

"That's the question," said Minnie, reflectively arching her jetty brows. "If we can only keep it from grandamma!"

"We must," retorted Minnie, with a decisive nod. "It would kill her. If we were men now, Nanny, we could go out and get a job of wood-sawing, or house-painting, or—"

"And why can't we now?"

"Why, because Pat O'Neill has got all Mrs. Baker's wood to saw, and because we can't climb ladders, with paint-pots over our shoulders."

"But we can do something else I suppose. Listen, Minnie—money we must have!"

"If we go out into the highways and ask it at the point of the bayonet!" interjected Minnie, gravely.

"There's no poverty like genteel poverty," her sister sighed. "But you haven't heard my plan. Mrs. Baker, the laundress in our top story, is sick."

"What then? We have neither wine nor jelly, nor yet crisp bank-notes to bestow upon her."

"And she can't keep up to her engagements. There are two Swiss muslin ball dresses, fluted and puffed beautifully, lying in her basket, waiting to be done up, at this present moment. Five dollars apiece she has for them."

"Well?"

"I shall do them up."

"Nanny! You?"

"Well why not? Think what a golden stream of pectolus ten dollars would be in our empty coffers! Ask yourself how on earth you or I could earn ten dollars any other way. And after all, a Swiss muslin dress is a pretty poetical sort of fabric to wash and iron; and into the bargain, poor Mrs. Barker keeps her customers."

"Oh, Nanny! have you come to that?"

"Now you look and talk just like dear old grandamma! Don't be a goose, Minnie! Just you invent some story about my being promenading in the park, or taking lessons in wax-flower making, to delude her credulous soul, while I go up stairs and coin money."

"But I may help you?"

"By-and-by, perhaps, if my wrists get tired. Not now; some one must stay with grandamma."

"It is very strange," said Miss Georgiette Appleton, "that my dresses have not come home! Positively, I shall have nothing to wear to-night!"

She was lounging before the sea-coal fire, in a blue silk negligee, trimmed with swans-down, and a little French tangle of blue ribbons and lace pinned among her yellow tresses, with a pearl-headed javelin, while a novel lay in her lap.

"What an awful fate!" observed her brother carelessly. "Where's the amethyst silk?"

"Oh, I wore that to their last reception?"

"And the pink crape?"

"I look like an owl in pink. I was a goose ever to buy that silk."

"The Nile green silk with the white flounces?"

"Sarah Howard has one, just a shade lighter, that she'll be sure to wear; and I believe the spiteful thing got it on purpose to kill mine. No, I must have the Swiss muslin, with knots of blue corn-flowers, and a Roman sash figured with gold. And you'll go around to the laundress, and hurry her up a little, won't you, George?—that's a duck of a brother!—and you know perfectly well you've been yawning your jaws off the last three-quarters of an hour."

"Where is it?"

"Only in Mendenhall Street—just a pleasant walk. And do give Mrs. Barker a scolding, and ask her if she don't know better than to keep her customers waiting—although, of course, I know you'll do nothing of the sort. Men have no moral courage. There's the address on a card. It'll be such a relief to my mind!"

Major George Appleton was an army officer, home on a furlough, and rather at a loss to know what to do with so much extra time. Rich, which was another source of perplexity—handsome, which wasn't so puzzling!

And so he sauntered along, his hands in his pockets and a cigar balanced between his lips, unconsciously advancing to meet his fate!

Rap! rap! rap! The Major played a tattoo with his knuckles on the door.

"Dear me, what a noise!" said a voice inside. "Come in!"—a little louder.

The Major walked in, to confront, not a wrinkled old hag of a washerwoman, in a halo of soap and steam, but a beautiful young lady dark and brilliant as an Arabian dream, with jetty curls pinned back in a silken cascade at the back of her head, and a pair of fluting scissors in her hand.

Major Appleton started back, all his wits momentarily deserting him. It is a curious fact that the more embarrassed one party in a tete-a-tete becomes, the greater is the composure of the other. Anna Breighton should have colored and stuttered, at being caught thus, but she didn't.

"What's your business, sir?" she asked, with the greatest calmness.

"It's—it's about my sister's gown—Miss Appleton's you know!"

"Ah!" said Anna. "I hope to have it ready very soon. If you'll wait ten minutes you may carry it home."

And she took a second pair of fluting scissors from the stove, testing it heat by holding it dangerously near her velvet cheek.

Major Appleton, not being posted in etiquette and general decorum, saw no harm in carrying home a basket of newly-laundred clothes. So he sat down and waited, while honest Mrs. Barker stared from the other room, where she lay upon her bed—a captive to rheumatic pains.

"She's in a hurry, you know," said the major, twirling his thumbs, and thinking how very pretty the girl was.

"So am I," said Anna, making
