Well Inlorsed.—The Gift Concerts in aid of the Kentucky Library are not at all speculative. The institution is chartered by the State of Kentucky. The first prize in the next drawing, which takes place November 30, is $250,000. It is a reliable institution, and some one will get that money. And that there may be no doubt as to the honesty of its management we cite the fact that the best banks in Louisville inlorsed it, and that Governor Thomas E. Bramlette, of Louisville, is the general manager. An institution so favored is certainly deserving of confidence.

Call Accepted.
Rev. D. K. Kepner, says the Allentown Democrat, has accepted the call to the pastorate of the Emmanuel Lutheran Church at Pottstown. He will preach his introductory sermon there on Sunday, January 3d. He has resided in Allentown for some years, and made a host of warm friends. Not only does his congregation regard him most highly, but all our people have the highest respect for him. Affable and pleasant in manner, agreeable always, anxious, kind and tender in the sick room, he will leave a community which has learned to love him. It is to be hoped that his new home will be as pleasant as he expects it to be.

Lehighton Institute.
The Institute was called to order by the President, J. L. Allen, who also conducted the opening exercises. Roll called; S. J. Barnett, J. L. Allen, Miss Hellman, Miss Nead and Miss Yarnall responded to their names. Miss Weaver, having been excused by the directors, was absent. Minutes of the previous meeting read, amended and approved. A motion was passed that the directors be informed of the insufficient warming and cleaning of our school building. Reports were given of the different schools. Select readings by S. J. Barnett, Miss Hellman and Miss Nead. A short time was occupied in a general conversation on the subject of attention; after which the business committee offered the following programme for next meeting: 1. General exercises. 2. Select reading, by J. L. Allen, Miss Yarnall and Miss Weaver. 3. Object Lessons, J. L. Allen. 4. Mental Philosophy—Subject, Attention. Adjourned to meet Dec. 7, 1874.

Fatal Accident.
Tuesday morning, about half after ten o'clock, while the men employed in the Columbia Slate Quarry, Slatington, were engaged in unloading slate, a large mass of loose earth caved in and completely covered up Mr. Reuben Hunsicker. His fellow-workman rendered all aid possible, but before they succeeded in bringing the unfortunate man into the open air, life was extinct, death being caused by suffocation. The deceased, who was beloved and esteemed by all who knew him, leaves a family, residing on Church-st., to mourn his untimely and sad death.—Morning Herald.

Slatington Letter.
SIR.—In your last edition you ask for news, and having been somewhat direct heretofore, I will send you a few items. On Saturday last as Mr. A. Peter was driving alongside of the railroad, his horse became frightened at the coal engine standing on the side track, turned short round, ran across the track against the switch, overturning the buggy and breaking it considerably; finally the horse ran away from the scene of destruction, but was caught before any further damage was done. No one was hurt except a few slight bruises. It will cost quite a sum to fix up the broken wagon again.

I saw a young Allentown sport on Sunday evening looking very glum. He walked a considerable distance, through the mud, to town during the afternoon, to see his dearly beloved home from church and to hold sweet converse, fit only for the gods to hear; but fortune frowned, and his dulcina was escorted to and from church by another—not the Allentown—"gummen. Such are the ways of those who have so many irons in the fire. Try again.

Mr. William Griffith and Miss Libbie Wildrick were united in the holy bonds of matrimony on Saturday evening, and on Monday night the young callithumpians had a glorious (according to their ideas) time serenading them. Our police were nowhere to be seen during the frightful noise made by these young boys, who should have been in bed instead of running the streets. A good spanking would have been the thing for their children, if they wish them to grow up idle and vicious. Many seem to choose this mode of educating their boys and even girls. A. L. SATINGTON, Nov. 24.

Terrible Smash-up at the Allentown Rolling Mill.
We condense the following account of the smash up at the Allentown Rolling Mill from the Morning Herald of Thursday:

About ten o'clock Wednesday morning the large fly wheel in the Allentown Rolling Mill (rail mill), weighing near forty tons, was jammed in the shaft, and with a crash like that of a thunder clap, the large and heavy arms were twisted off at the base and sent flying in different directions. Amid this now total wreck a number of men were built at work, and at the first warning of the terrible disaster, they stood dumb-founded with terror and alarm, not comprehending where the terrible noise came from. With the velocity of lightning a segment was thrown high into the ventilator with a terrific crash. The stout timbers and iron beams, holding the frame work together, could little resist this ponderous messenger, which came tearing and demolishing everything in its way. A large opening was made in the roof, the timber and iron bars within fifteen and twenty feet, being in splinters and twisted in almost every shape imaginable. From there the arm fell down on the boiler with a heavy thud, and fortunately the strong braces and iron, resisted its force, stopping further progress, which was so destructive and dangerous to the many human beings surrounding it. Another segment was carried through the roof at the northern entrance, and continuing on its course landed on the roof of the puddle mill, crushing and smashing its way through, knocking off the steam pipe which added greatly to the noise and confusion, and then landed on the bed plate in front of a furnace and directly opposite the engine, which is enclosed and covered. The bed plate was broken in three or four parts, but this didn't stop the dangerous and heavy missile from proceeding further. It bounced off and struck the ground about eighteen feet to the northwest, penetrating two or three feet. When it struck the bed plate, cinders and pieces of iron were scattered, and unfortunately Patrick Sowards, who was at the hydrant taking a drink, was struck on the jaw, by what is not known, and fell to the ground. John Fie the engineer was in the engine room and when the fragment of arm came tearing through the roof, a heavy piece of timber was carried along with it, and this falling on the roof of the engine room, broke through and came in contact with Mr. Fie, knocking him senseless. The scene as presented is almost indescribable. It is a wreck complete and one never before witnessed by the Allentown's citizens. It is only fortunate and really miraculous, that only two men, out of the large number in so close proximity at the time of the accident, were injured.

Friday Afternoon in School.
Quite a pleasant time was had last Friday afternoon in this school room between the Grammar school and the High school. It is the custom in all the schools to have different exercises every Friday afternoon such as dialogues, compositions, &c. The exercises last Friday were quite interesting and instructive. The exercises began with singing, by the High school, "Parserevere," after that a very good piece was read by Edwin Dollemayer, the subject being "Life;" a piece entitled "The Milkmaid," by Harry E. Sweeney a piece entitled "Our Ships," by Albert Dollemayer; a dialogue entitled "The Farmer and the Philosopher," by E. Dollemayer, J. Kistler and G. Musleman, which was very good, especially so in the part where the farmer exercised his muscles; singing by the schools of a piece entitled "Mountain of the Lord," after singing a dialogue entitled "Spelling Class" was given by the Grammar school—very good; next came the "Boot black" who received a few cents for his work on a common pair of boots, owned by a good looking gentleman living not over 12 miles out of this place—but nevertheless a perfect stranger. After the little "Boot black" was done with his shining boots, a little fresh air was given the scholars in the shape of a short recess; after the recess The Fruit Basket motto "grow in wisdom," belonging to the High School, was opened and some rich fruit taken out. The following being some of the fruit: 1st. An Editorial essay, by the Editors, which was not very long but nevertheless rich; 2nd. An essay entitled "Library Societies," by a young lady; 3rd. An essay entitled "The school and one of its necessities," by a young lady; 4th. "An Arabian story;" 5th. "Fan;" 6th. "Incidents that happen at school;" 7th. "Kindness exemplified;" 8th. "A revengeful story;" 9th. "Squiblets;" 10th. and last was an essay entitled "Our little band," composed by one out of 17 (not 17) scholars, so guess who is the seventh. After the fruit from the fruit basket was disposed of a spelling match was had between half the scholars of the Grammar school and half of the High school on one side, and the other half of each school on the other side, the second side being victorious one of the words missed was blowing, spelled by B—blowing—after the spelling a short dialogue was recited by Geo. Musleman and Harry Sweeney, entitled "Satisfactory reply," after the dialogue the schools were dismissed, everyone enjoying the exercises of the afternoon.

Coal Trade.
The Philadelphia Inquirer, of the 23d inst., says: "There is no improvement to notice in the condition of the coal trade; it was excessively dull during the whole week, and with no indications of its being any better for the remainder of the year. Letters from Boston, Providence and other points in New England report large stocks in the hands of dealers, and also stored in the companies' yards, sufficient to meet the probable demand for the next three months. The factories and mills are consuming less coal than usual owing to the one-third short time and the use of water power wherever it is available. The iron masters of the Lehigh and Schuylkill valleys are a good deal exercised about the condition of the trade. A meeting is proposed for this week, to be held in this city, to take into consideration the general condition of the iron trade, the high price of fuel and the advisability of blowing out. The line trade in coal is now only moderately active. Any further suspension of iron works and furnaces would occasion a serious diminution in the consumption of coal. It seems to be generally understood among the trade that sometime during the next month there will be a general suspension of mining and shipments from the Schuylkill region, to continue until the 1st of March, thus affording an opportunity to reduce the stocks and start on a better basis in the spring. It is believed also that the prices will open higher next year than they did this, and that there will not be so many monthly advances. The total shipments so far this year from all the regions and of both kinds of coal have amounted to 19,778,824 tons, against 20,685,627 tons for the corresponding time last year, a decrease of 890,908 tons. The supply so far of bituminous coal (including in the above) has been 3,953,883 tons, against 2,950,809 tons last year. The shipments from Mauch Chunk South since the 1st of January over all the avenues of transportation have amounted to 5,233,418 tons, against 5,245,610 tons for the corresponding time last year, and last week 145,458 tons, against 115,703 tons for the corresponding time last year."

Special Notices.
A SUBSTITUTE FOR QUININE.—For years, quinine was regarded as the only specific for malarial fevers and immense quantities of the drug were annually consumed throughout our western country, more particularly along the river bottoms and adjoining low lands.

With the fall months malaria, in all its varied forms, stalks like an epidemic through the land, and whole districts are prostrated with chills and fever, the entire population, and especially the Heretofore, quinine was regularly resorted to, but while it frequently failed to effect a cure, it invariably damaged the stomach, producing nausea, vertigo and fugitive pains in the head to such an extent that months elapsed ere the system recovered from its effects. Those objections to its use were so marked, that the introduction of Misher's Herb Bitters was hailed as a triumph in medicine. Infinitely more certain in its benefits than quinine, it possessed none of the effects that drug. Instead of assaulting, it tones and invigorates the stomach, and while specially expelling the malarial humors, it stimulates and facilitates digestion; thus rendering the system stronger, and better fitted to resist the attacks of disease. In fact, a judicious use of Misher's Herb Bitters at this season of the year, will prevent the recurrence of this disease, even in those who have never passed an autumn without it. An experience of twenty years prove it to be the greatest ever known to medical science.

There is, perhaps, no disease more subject to climatic changes as affections of the kidneys. Hundreds of our farmers, mechanics, and laboring men, strong and hardy in all other respects, suffer continual indispositions, and occasionally experience pain in the back and across the loins; experience a frequent desire to pass water, pain during its passage and frequent stoppages in its flow. These are manifestations resulting from some strain or heavy lift (perhaps years ago) and aggravated by every change in the weather. Every slight cold direct to the one weak spot, and unless promptly attended to the disease becomes chronic, and its one strong man a miserable wreck. Misher's Herb Bitters is the only certain remedy for this class of diseases. It has a peculiar tendency to the kidneys, and stimulates them to healthy action, and removing the causes, prevents the formation of brick-dust deposits, which, if permitted to continue, will by cohesion form gravel stones, necessitating a painful operation for its removal. Many of the ingredients, and especially its composition, are universally recognized as specific for all complaints of the urinary organs. In Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, all disorders of the bowels, and affections of the throat and lungs, it is equally certain and efficacious; while, as a remedy for the complaint peculiar to the female sex, it has no equal. Ladies, old and young, married and single, in every condition of life, will find this GREAT FEMALE REMEDY prompt, safe, certain and reliable. The pale, yellow complexion is replaced by a blooming, healthy countenance, and its ordinary use enables Nature to perform her functions regularly and with vigor.

Mrs. LANE'S Certain Cure for Increasing Nails

Piles! Piles!! Piles!!!
Piles, Internal, External, Hemorrhoid or Itching.—The intense suffering occasioned by the distressing disease, in the various forms, is known only to those who are unfortunate enough to be afflicted with it. The agonizing nights, the uncomfortable days, the laggard looks of the sufferer bear witness of the intensity of the pain experienced when troubled with this distressing disease. The success of Briggs' Mile Remedy as a positive cure is unequalled in the annals of medicine. Relief is unobtainable when used as directed. The immense demand for this great remedy is unparallelled.
