The Lecture on Palestine.

In the M. E. church, on Thursday evening, was well attended, the church being well filled. Those who were present describe the Rev. Dr. Murphey, as a very eloquent and pleasing speaker, and that he was listened to throughout with the greatest attention. We understand that the rev. gentleman has two other lectures in connection with this subject and we trust our Methodist friends will feel themselves warranted in a repetition of the same, thereby affording him the opportunity of addressing a full house.

A Fraud.

Prof. Devere, magician and ventriloquist, visited our borough, during the past week. On Wednesday evening he gave one of his performances in the new hall of the school house to an audience of some 40 or 50 persons, and on Thursday evening was to repeat his performance. The doors were open at the usual time, and the worthy Prof. and his assistance, commenced to sell tickets and take in cash, the hall being pretty well filled. Having taken in all they could, the party passed through the hall and across the stage, and slipped off through the back door, leaving the audience in anxious expectancy of the promised performance. But the Prof. had prepared a sleight of hand trick act on the bills—he had vamoosed with the people's money. From the clatter of feet and the terribleness of the yells of the deceived ones, as they passed our office in search of the Prof. of Fraud, we are inclined to think it was lucky for him they did not catch him.

Justice Gould

Died at the residence of his son, at Packerton, on Saturday morning last, at about four o'clock. The following notice we clip from the Mauch Chunk correspondence of the Morning Herald: "The funeral took place Tuesday, 1.30 p. m. from the residence of his son, Mr. Jerry Gould, at Packerton, and the remains were brought up in passenger train No. 4, Lehigh Valley Railroad, and sleighs were in waiting at the depot. A large concourse followed the remains to the Upper Mauch Chunk cemetery. Mr. Gould was an old resident of Mauch Chunk, and settled here when nothing but woods were to be seen. For a number of years he carried on the blacksmithing business in his shop where the elegant residence of Mrs. P. Sharkey now stands. He sold the shop to Mr. Jack Levers, and then worked for the Lehigh Valley Railroad at Packerton. Mr. Gould owned and resided in the house where Mr. Fred C. Kline now lives, and who purchased it of Mr. Gould, he removing to Packerton and living with his son Jerry, a short time after the death of his wife.

A Long Strike Expected.

Delegates of the miners and operators held a conference in Hazleton, on Monday last last. The delegates represented six thousand men, and the total number to be affected by a suspension will number about twenty thousand along the line of the Lehigh River and Lehigh Valley and L. & S. Railroads in the Lehigh region. All the delegates expressed great opposition to the proposed basis, and a determination was expressed to hold out against it. The miners resolved that there should be an open meeting between the delegates and the operators, and a circular was adopted addressed to the operators, showing the fallacy of the argument that the cost of living had declined to ante-war prices, asserting that the cost of living now was from 35 to 45 per cent. beyond the prices of 1869, and that wages, though apparently a little more, are actually less sufficient to provide the necessaries and comforts of life than fifteen years ago. A secret session of operators took place, the proceedings of which are unknown, but the result is known to be a persistence in the resolutions adopted at the meeting of Dec 31. The meeting of miners and operators adjourned subject to the call by the members of both committees. The general feelings are that there will be a great strike, and far worse than that of 1869.

Big Creek, Jan. 13th 1875. W. E.

What was it.

On Wednesday noon an observer stationed at Bengler's photographic gallery might have seen a number of ladies wearily wending their way over the bridge that connects Lower and Upper Slatington. There was nothing remarkable in the appearance of any particular one of them, but, strange to say, a looker on might have perceived something unusual in their manner of walking, and in their apparent indifference to all passing events. Perhaps, we thought, they are on an errand, and, like sisters of charity, are searching for some one to whom a helping hand can be extended. Our conjectures were not out of place; for in a few moments, the top of the hill was reached, and a few of the knowing ones of their number, turned the corner of Second street, proceeded on their way until the house of Rev. L. K. Derr was reached, and there a "halt" was ordered for a few moments, until the "drawback" members of this undisciplined company were again ready for further orders. The command was soon given. It sounded much like this: "Prepare to march and give." Which manœuvre was happily accomplished without a single error of Hardee's tactics, so well was it carried out. The march was kept up till the inside of the house was reached, when the command of "Unpack" was given, and to the surprises of the visited ones, palatable things, &c., of a very good nature, were eagerly spread upon tables, &c., by this body of unknown friends. We have since heard that the visitors came from Lehighton, and intended the visit as a donation party to Rev. L. K. Derr. He being their pastor, they, in justice to himself, thought that returning "good for good" should be their errand, and consequently the result as above mentioned.—Slatington News.

Friend Schlauch, this is a way our people have of doing things generally.

The Snyder Insurance Case.

We clip the following summary of the proceedings in the Snyder case from the Morning Herald of Thursday last: On Tuesday morning, before Judge Dreher and the jury in the Monroe County Court, at Stroudsburg, R. E. Wright, Jr., Esq., commenced his argument for the defendant, and after a clear, logical, and very forcible address, was followed by Mr. Green on the other side, who made a speech in every way worthy of his reputation as an eminent attorney—indeed, it was said by some who know him well, that it was one of the best and most telling addresses he ever delivered. In the afternoon Mr. Fox followed Mr. Green, dwelling with great force on the fact of the suit being brought by a widow and her only son, and appealing rather to the sympathies then to the reason of the jurymen. In the course of his remarks he dwelt for a long time on the conduct of Belling in not assisting Monroe Snyder to his home, and made that part of his address so strong that he impressed one juror with the conviction, that good old Mr. Belling, a man whose reputation for honesty and veracity is unimpeachable, and who is a good hearted, kind old man, was the murderer of Monroe Snyder. After Mr. Fox came Mr. Harvey in the closing speech for the defence. With that graceful, easy eloquence for which he is distinguished, he reviewed all the testimony in the case, in the course of a reasonable and logical argument, to the effect that Monroe Snyder was in a condition of mind brought about by his financial embarrassments, which induced him to deliberately plan a suicide which should look like a murder—so that the companies "must pay the policies." He argued that the evidences bore out this theory, and made such a skillful use of the letter Snyder left in connection with the facts relative to his death, that he produced a visible effect upon the minds of many persons in the large audience assembled. Mr. Harvey's address occupied near three hours in the delivery, and at its conclusion Court adjourned until a quarter past seven o'clock, when Judge Dreher commenced to charge the jury. His charge was an array of fact against fact—but it did not touch upon some very important facts. The judge is evidently a very fair man, and was very anxious to do even justice in this case. But exception was taken by the attorneys for the defence to the charge, before the jury went out. At about half-past eight o'clock on Tuesday evening the jury retired, and at half-past five o'clock on Wednesday morning, they sealed their verdict and separated. When Court convened, they returned a verdict for the plaintiffs for the full amount of the policies and interest. The case involves some $55,000. A motion was made for a new trial, and, after a spirited argument between the attorneys, the Court gave the defendants ten days to file reasons (which are to be furnished to plaintiff's attorneys) and the argument is to take place before Judge Dreher, at Mauch Chunk, on the first day of February.

Once more the case of Monroe Snyder's insurance money rests.

The Shooting Affair at Audenried.

The Hazleton Daily News, of the 13th inst., says:—Our correspondent at Audenried sends us the following account of the circumstances which led to the killing of Oliver Richards, near that place, in December. He writes as follows: Previous to the affair, Wm. Goldstraw, Anthony Fairlees, Alix Wallaego, Wm. Willis, set out in company to Beaver Brook, better known as Frenchtown, to procure some pigeons for a shooting match, they were to have some time during the week. On their way back they stopped in Mr. Fowler's Hotel, and one of the party treated, Goldstraw, being a member of the Sons of Temperance division of this place, taking cream beer. They then went down to Mr. Willis's, where they sat until about eleven P. M. when Goldstraw and Fairlees, started for home. On their way they met Oliver Richards, McNulty, and Dunnigan, and as they passed McNulty said there goes Gold straw now, and the trio turned back after them. McNulty had threatened Goldstraw before, and knowing this, and the characters of the men he had to contend with, stopped as soon as he found they were following him, and believing that his life was in danger drew his revolver, and commanded them to stand back. They took no heed of this whatever but still pressed on until they were within arms length of him. Knowing that the time for action had arrived, and determined not to shoot if possible, Goldstraw threw his revolver from his right to his left hand, dealt McNulty such a blow that sent him to the ground, then fired a shot in the air to scare them back if possible. Just then Richards, who was the blindfoot of the party, jumped forward, at the same time putting his hand into the inside pocket of his coat drew out a revolver and exclaimed "I will show you how to shoot." Goldstraw saw by this time that they intended to take his life, and that the time to defend himself had arrived, ordered Richards, three times to stand back or he would shoot him, in fact he delayed so long that had he hesitated a second longer it would have been too late, as Richards had the revolver at his breast. At this crisis Goldstraw fired, the shot taking effect in the left side about 4 inches to the breast bone, the ball passing through the body, and coming out on the right side. Goldstraw then gave himself up at once to J. F. Brink, Coal and Iron Police, of this place.

Squire W. E. Beven, impaneled a jury of the most respectable and disinterested men of our town, who after examining all the witnesses gave an impartial verdict, that Oliver Richards came to his death by a pistol shot in the hands of William Goldstraw, in defence of his own life.

The jury were Thos. Daugherty, Foreman A. Lufkin, Charles Howell Frank Falls, A. Dugan, and George Faehrer. Goldstraw is represented as a quiet inoffensive young man, much beloved by all who knew him, while Richards was known as a desperate and reckless man when excited by passion or drink.
