The Snuff-Colored Suit.

was that I was straight and still on lay still and let 'em alone until they something hard, and when I tried to got fired of it, and then they went out, move myself and speak I found it ims and I was again left to my own pleaspossible to do so. I concluded that I and reflections. must be in some very tight place, for I could not see; in fact I soon learned fellows with their girls, to sit up with out until after I lad I ft the house. that, though perfectly conscious, I me and they had a july time of it, alcould do nothing but hear. A door opened and footsteps approached; but 1 teit a cloth taken from my face, and a voice which I recognized as that of Mr. Jones-the father of my wife that was to be-sald:

"He hasn't changed much," and his companion whose voice I knew to be the village undertaker, Hopkins by name, lightly:

"Better looking dead than alive. How does J. rusha feel about it? Take on much?" "Oh no, she had her eye on another fellow any how, and a better match too, excepting the money part. Though I had nothing against Benjonly he didn t know much, and was about the hemliest man I ever knew. Such a mouth; why it really seemed as though he was going to swallow knofe, p ate, and all, when be opened it at dinner."

"Weil," said the cheerful voice of Hopkins, 'be'll never open his mouth again;" and then he proceeded to measare me for I was dead. I had heard of undertakers who always winstled joyfully when they got a measure, but I never celleved it before. But that man actually whistled a subdued dancing tune while he measured me, and it seemed to me that two or three leaders were rolling down my back, to the music of his whistie.

His duty done, they covered my face again and left me to my own reflections, which were not particularly comforting, withough I had aften heard it remarked, that meditation was good for the som, and this was the best chance I ever had of trying it.

An hour must have passed when the door again opened, and two persons came whispering along to where I lay, and the voice of my promised wife feil upon my ear.

"I dread to look at him, Bob; he was so mortal homely, alive, be must be trigatiul, dead."

I grand my teeth in imagination, as I remembered how often she and gone into raptures, or pretended to, over my noble brow, and expressive mouth; and how she had orten declared that if I were taken away from her she would surely pine away and die.

One of them raised the cloth, and I knewsthey were looking at me. Bob was her second cousin, and I knew that he was that "other fellow," whom her father had mentioned.

"Scens to me you don't feel very bad about his dying, 'Rosha,'' remarked Bob, mediatively. "Well, to tell the truth," said my dear betrothed, "I don't care very much about it. It he had lived I should have married blue, because he is rich and father wanted me to; but I was about sick of my bargain, for I knew I should always be ashamed of him, he looked so like a baboon. "But you loved him," remarked Bob. "No, I didn't! My affectious were wa-ted long ago upon one who never returned my love;" and my fast-fading idol sighed heavily.

"They had covered my face by this time, and were standing a few steps from where I lay.

"About how long ago, 'Rusha?" ask-

"A year, or such a matter," with another even sigh, which ended in a fit of speczing. "About the time I went away," interrogated the cautious Bob, coughing "Well, yes, some'res near," assented my denr affianced.

"Now, Jerusha, you dou't mean to instructe that I''-"I don't mean to insinuate anything, Bob Smith?" and the angelic sweetness of her voice was somewhat sharpened.

"Now, see here, 'Rusha, I've loved next time until I was sately buried beyou ever since you were knee high to a gopher, but I thought when you came home that you was sweet on that other chap; but I swan I believe you liked me all the time!"

"Oh, Bob!" said my was-to-be, in a gushing sort of way. "Mine own Jerushal" replied Bob. Then I heard a subsided rush, ac-

I scarcely know how it happened, but something to relieve my outragea feel- die for me." a timber must have fell and struck me ing, but not a kick nor a grate could. I raise. It was an awful fire to be in but The first thing that I realized after it I had to stand it, or rather lay it, so I plied.

> Night came, and so did a lot of young though it was against my principles to enjoy it on so so emn an occasion.

It seemed an age until morning, but it came at last and they went away. I heard them say that I was to be buried that day at 2 o'clock, and I was begining to feel decidedly shaky, when Jerusha and her mother came into the room and began arranging for the funeral.

"Rusha," said her mother, "here is that sunif colored suit of poor Ben's; he will never have any more use for clothes, so just but them away among your earpet-rags; they'd make a spiendid stripe."

Now that particular suit of clothes was fust the neatest one I ever owned. arm-holes, calars, wrist-bands, buttons, all just the thing, and my blood boiled to hear them talk so coolly of using them for stripes in a rag carpet. They kept on talking as they swept, dusted and cleaned up the room.

"Bob says he will take the Martin farm to work this year," raid Jerusha, cheeriully, "and as soon as we are married we shall go to housekeeping in that little cottage close to the road. Now I must get my carpet done, just as soon as possible, for I want it in that nice little froat room. These dulls of Ben's will make out enough rags, I guess. His folks live so far away they will never inquire about his clothes. Now, if it wasen't for the looks of it, we could ask old Mother Smith about coloring yellow; she's sure to be here to-day." I was cetting very mad now, Indeed,

I felt that the crisis was near, and that I should either die or explode If they did not let my snuff colored sult alone. Jerusha picked them up-I knew it, for I heard the buckles and buttons jingle-and made for the door. I tried to shake my fi-t and yell at her, but all in van. I laid there, outwardly as quiet as a lamb, inwardly boiling with wrath. It was too much, the deepest trance could not have held out against the loss of that suit. With a powerful effort I sprang up and screamed. Jerusha dropped my clothes, and h r mo ther the duster, and both fled from the room and the house never stopping until they reached Dr. Brown's across the street. With difficulty I managed to get my clothes. I but just got them tairiy on, when Mrs. Jones and her daughter, followed by a numerou company of men, women and children, came peeping cautiously into the room. I sat on my board and looked at them. such a seared looking crowd was enough to amuse an owl, so I inughed; I knew it was unbecoming, but I conlin't have helped it if they had chucked me into my coffin-which the undertaker was just carrying past the window-and buried me the next minute. I faughed until I jarred the chair out from under one end of the board, and down I went with a crash. Then the doctor ventured into the room, saying rather dublous

"So you are not dead yet, Ben?" "Well, no, not exactly," I replied; 'sorry to disappoint my Triends about

A Scotchman, 80 years old, and nearby deaf was natural zed recently in Kaysville, Utah, the Judge descending to shout his interrogatories into the old man's ear. When asked if he intended to obey the laws, he answered, in his native Scotch dialect, that 'it wasna worth while for him to dae otherwise

While Sarah Clark and Julia Thomson of Omaha were engaged in kicking at a mark in a barn the other day, their feet at the same instant caught under a board that sprang away from the beaut to which it was nailed, and there they were obliged to stand until their cries brought help. The board that held them was five feet and seven inches from the floor, and old Omaha sports say that not a man in the State could kick higher.

A bibulous gentleman went home New Year's about ten o'clock, after making Sundry calls, and feeling rather "discouraged," thought he would walk up and down the street awhile to cool off b fore meeting his better half. The air was very thin and insinuating, but he stood it for an hour, when be screwed up his courage, and, half froen, entered his domicile. His remarks were more empathic than otherwise when the servant informed him that his wife had gone out to spend the evening and would not return until mid-

Allen, the Vermont burgular, made a shewed attempt to escape from the Chelsea juli, the other night, by rigging up a "dummy" in a sitting posture upon his bed and apparently reading a newspaper and fixing its leg so that it jogged quietly up and down. The officer who came to lock the prisoners up at night asked if everything was right, and a voice said it was. 11) locked the door and went into the cell above, when he saw some one going along the walk, and running out caught Allen, whom he sup osed he had locked in his cell. The leg of the dummy was operated by a string which passed into the cell above, the occupant of which worked to nil Allen in his escape, while the answer to the officer's question was made through the ventilator.

Rev. Dr. Rogers, in his Thanksgiving sermon, said: - "Had Governor Peter Minuits been told that this N. Y. island, which in 1628 he purchased from the Lidians for the sum of $24, would, in two hundred and fifty year-, be worth in real and personal property, the astorriding som of more than one thousand millions of dollars, he would have probably considered it a better investment than it appeared to be then. And yet, strange to say, such is the law of the ingrease of mon-y, that if this $24 had been invested on compound interest at that time, and had doubted itself in every ten years, and been subject to no loss a nor deductions, it would have approximated, the entire value of the real and personal property of Manhattan Island to day."

In connection with the visit of the King of the Sandwich Islands to this country, the announcement will be read with special interest, that a monument has recently been erected on one of the ishurds, to the mean ry of Captain Cook, who was kined by the suvage of O waysher. Hawait mine y five years ago Pao ceremony took place on the 14th Xiv., in the presence of Major Wishelbouse, the English Commissioner, and the captain of the Senat. The monoment is set tain of the Scoat. The monument is an obelish twenty-five feet high, and mounted on a loss eight feet square. It hears the following inscription: "In means the individual description: "In means of the ereampayigator, Cap-tan James Cook, A. N., who discov-ered these islands on the 18th of Jan., A. D. 1778, and fell near this spat on the 14th of Feb., A. D. 1770. Ta.s monument was erected in Nov., A. D. 1871. 1874, by some of his fellow country-men." It is erected on a suitable spot ly over your pale face, my beloved."
"Yee," I replied, "I heard you and on which the captain fell.
