The Last Cry.

"The last cry heard was that of a little child in the cabin." So runs the cold and formal dispatch which announces the breaking up of the Schiller and the loss of more than three hundred lives. A little child in the cabin, and its poor infantile appeal for help! Not all the tragedy of that sad affair, the death of the noble captain at his post, we hope, as became a man and a seaman the ending of the struggle with death upon the sharp rocks of Scilly, which the gallant sailors doubtless fought, or the drowning of the women who were on board, pitiful creatures whose hair is already turned to seaweed—none of these fates equals that of the child whose cry was the last sound heard as the noble ship struck the cruel rock. It seems almost like a violation of the sanctity of grief, like an invasion of the heart that means and refuses to be healed, of the sorrow that will not be comforted, to mention this thing, but the cry of that child will be heard around the globe, piercing the ear and tending the heart of every man who reads the story. A little child! What magic there is in those words! What chords do they touch! What memories revive! A little child, pure and fresh, the handwork of the Maker, before the debasing breath of earth had struck it. Sweet and innocent, the image of his Maker and the reflection of angels. We do not wish to be accused of sentimentalism, nor do we desire to be pathetic; but the voluntary touch of the telegraph operator upon the key he struck in the brief sentence we have quoted, will vibrate through a million hearts—One touch of nature makes the whole world kin. It is needless now to speculate upon the future of that little child had he lived, and it was perhaps ordered wisely and well that he should die, as he did. The ocean is the graveyard of greater dead than the earth, and in its bosom, unclaimed and unknelt, lie some of the world's best heroes. Westminster Abbey is no nobler tomb than the dark, unfathomed caves of ocean, wherein lie those that died that others might live, and who perished in the most unselfish cause for which man can die—the preservation of the lives of their fellow-beings. Let us hope that the child was saved—the stories run that way, telling us not only of braids snatched from the burning, but of wrecks cast upon the shore, that afterwards bore themselves as bravely as the best Casabianca, over whose melancholy ending we mourned in our youth, was a subaltern in the ranks of heroism compared with the child who made his voice heard above the roar of the winds, the rush of the waters, and the thunder of the breakers, the night the good ship Schiller went down. Perhaps his father had been swept into the sea an hour before; doubtless he laid warm upon the cold breast of his dead mother, but that cry which rouses the best nature of man, and has sometimes stayed the murderer's hand, was heard above the din of the waves, and at the mercy of heaven itself; for was it not he who said, "Suffer little children to come under me, for of such are the kingdom of heaven."—Philadelphia Times.

Paragraph. A rather singular sight occurred at the depot Friday afternoon. A lady was going by when a gentleman stepped out and said to her: "How do you do?" extending his hand and smiling cheerfully. "I beg pardon," said she, looking hard at him, "you have the advantage of me." "Why, don't you know me?" he asked, amazed. "I can't remember you," she said. "Why, I used to be your husband—John Augustus Henderson, you know." She remembered him.—Danbury News.

The Rev. Esau Burden, a negro preacher in Charleston, S. C., adopted a novel but effective way of raising the money to bury a dead parishioner. Laying a five-dollar bill on his pulpit desk, he said: "Who'll cover that?" A brother walked up and put down a bill of like denomination. The clergyman then spread out a two-dollar bill and repeated the question, "Who'll cover that?" and somebody responded. So he went on with decreasing amounts until, displaying ten cents, he shouted: "Now for the Sunday school children—which of the lambs will cover that?"

At the Frome Petty sessions in England, the other day, Major Wickham and Mr. George Wood Sheppard sentenced Sarah Beachin, an old woman, 66 years of age, to fourteen days imprisonment with hard labor for stealing a halfpenny worth of coal belonging to the managers of Trinity School, Frome. The only witness called was a policeman, who said he saw the prisoner come out of an iron gate leading to the street with the coal in her possession wrapped in a paper, but he could not say that she came from the school house. The Superintendent of Police said he knew nothing against the woman. The prisoner said she found the coal in a dung heap in the yard adjoining the school. She had been employed for the last twenty-six years in cleaning out the school every day. The old woman seemed staggered at the sentence, and left the court crying bitterly.

A moving tail—a hungry dog's. Between two evils choose neither. The end of everything—the letter g. Can you spell consent in three letters? Y-p-s.

Even the laziest boy can sometimes catch a whipping. How much does a fool weigh generally? A simple ton. The only suits that last longer than you want are law suits.

Title for a five-cent saying bank—the St. Nickleus.—Mail. As twice eleven are twenty-two, how can twice ten be twenty, too.

With care a man can walk uprightly. One who is on the alert will not be found on the orange peel.—Mail. "I am bound to have my rights," as the man said to the shoemaker who had sold him a pair of boots, both lefts.

Enterprise. The Chicago Times sold twenty thousand extra copies on the strength of the editor's going to jail. When Agassiz was pressed to deliver a lecture for pay, he replied: "I cannot afford to waste my time for money."

What is the difference between a belle and a burglar? The belle carries false locks, and the burglar false keys. Love is sed to be blind, but I know lots of phellows in love who can see twice as much in their galls as I can.—Josh Billings.

Story, the sculptor, is making a sensation in Florence, Italy, by his impersonation of Shylock, who was a chiseler.—Mail. A gentleman observing the sign of "Caswell" upon a business establishment, remarked that it would be "as well without the C."—Mail.

"Is this the Adams House?" asked a stranger of a Bostonian. "Yes," was the reply, "it's Adams' House until you get to the roof, then it's eaves."

They wondered at the short collections in a Missouri church, and investigated to find that one of the collectors had tar in the top of his hat. A traveler called for mint-sauce at a hotel the other day, and the waiter said that they had none, adding: "Our cook makes all the mints into pies, not sauce."

Why call him the "groom" as eight out of ten people do? A groom's business is to look after horses. A bridegroom's business is to look after his wife's mother.

"Lord, make us truly thankful for what we are about to receive—these biscuits ain't fitted for a dog to eat," is the way a certain Morano, La., man asks a blessing. A little American lad who had just commenced reading the newspaper, asked his father if the word "Hon." prefixed to the name of a member of Congress, meant "honest."
