

—We have received a communication from a tax-payer, in which he complains to the matter in which the borough statement is given. He says that the borough statement is not a true and correct statement of what purposes the borough money has been paid out. This course, while it is no doubt would have been more satisfactory to the public, would have been attended with greater expense — a necessary which the Auditors do not wish to avoid. The matter of $25 paid to a member of Council, we are assured, is for labor performed outside of his official capacity, and is a legitimate bill against the borough. It is not a bribe. It is a fee for services rendered. It is a fee for services rendered. It is a fee for services rendered.

THE NEXT GOVERNOR.

The different parties in this State are marshalling their forces for the coming fall campaign, and from present appearances quite an animated canvass may be anticipated.

The Republicans have already named their man, and placed him squarely before the people. The leaders are quite sanguine of success, and no doubt honest in their logical reasoning why Gov. Hartranft should occupy the chair of State another term.

The Democratic Convention is not far in the distance. Quite a number of very able names have already been suggested, and we have no doubt there are many others still to come. Present indications appear to favor the nomination of Ex-Governor William Bigler, although in these days of political intrigue there might be an unlooked slip betwixt the cup and the lip.

His friends are urging his claims with good confidence, and point with pride to the purity and honesty of his previous administration. Mr. Bigler is a fine scholar, a chaste and popular orator, and his perfect knowledge of our political organizations will make him quite a formidable competitor for the honor at stake.

The Temperance men have given us their man, and are working with some earnestness.

With these three great parties in the field we can readily anticipate an excited campaign when the ball fairly opens. We bespeak moderation and fair play. Those, however, who do not wish to get their corns squeezed had better keep out of the crowd.

—The troubles of Tweed hang about him like the visage of Hamlet's ghost. That $3,000,000 ball appears to be a gopher. On Saturday last, Judge Barrett rendered a decision, on the motion to vacate the order of arrest on the suit against Tweed for $6,000,000, or reduce the bail from $3,000,000 to a reasonable amount. He declines to vacate the order of arrest, as the plaintiffs are entitled to as many provisional remedies as they can make out a case for until their claim is secured. As to the branch of motion, he says the general rule is to require the defendant arrested in a civil action for fraud to furnish bail in a sum sufficient to cover plaintiff's claim. More than that is excessive, less, generally insufficient; and for this reason he declines to reduce the bail, and denies the motion, with $10 costs.

—The public had hoped that by the disagreement of the jury there would be an end to the Beecher-Tilton scandal; but such does not appear to be the case. On Monday afternoon last a notice from Mr. Tilton's attorneys was served on Mr. Beecher's attorneys, in which it is stated:

"That the issue of fact in the above action will be brought on for trial and argued before the jury on the first Monday of September next."

It appears from this that we are to have a relish of this pestilential sore. It may afford some food for idle gossipers, but the moral disposed people have had a feast of the matter, and desire the whole subject consigned to the "tomb of the Capulets."

—An exchange tells us that it rained on Monday. We'd like to know who didn't experience that—as it was just such a cold, dismal, gloating rain, that we shiver even now while speaking about it. If there are times when the blues invite Frenchmen to the Seine, we should pick out just such a day as Monday as the most suitable for their notions. There is consolation sometimes, however, in perplexity—and it is afforded in the knowledge that while the human family were rendered miserable for a season only, the potato bug obtained its just deserts. And now we expect to hear of more potatoes, and less potato bugs. So mote it be.

—The Brooklyn Argus says it is rumored that Francis D. Moulton will shortly make an effort to secure Henry Ward Beecher's indictment and trial on a charge of perjury.

—The Luzerne County Agricultural Fair will be held at Wyoming, commencing Sept. 28th, and continuing three days.

—It some of the counties are modest in their desire for State officers, Lehigh can't be classed among that enviable number. They appear to have the material to fill all the elective State offices this fall, and they are not backward in proclaiming the fact. Hon. John D. Stiles, of Allentown, is suggested for Governor, and M. H. Horn, of Catawago, and Jos. Hallett, of Allentown, for State Treasurer. Probably our neighbors are operating on the principle that by striking at the head they may perchance lay hold of the tail.

CAMP MEETING.—A camp meeting under the auspices of the M. E. Church commenced on Wednesday of last week, in a fine grove near Germansville, Lehigh county. It was largely attended during the week, and on Sunday it is estimated there were about ten thousand persons present. The utmost system and regularity prevails, and we understand many conversions have been obtained. It is located about seven miles back of Slatington, on the Berks County R. R., and is accessible by rail from almost every direction.

—A chap the other day employed a novel way for raising the wind. He would step into a business place hurriedly, and ask the loan of two cents, to add to three which he already had, for the stated purpose of getting a boy to assist in carrying a box from the depot. He became indebted to quite a number of our citizens in the sum of two cents, and as he failed to refund, we presume he is now engaged in hunting up the boy. Next.

—Plymouth Church appears to be in a quandary as to the means of raising the $70,000 of the hundred thousand recently cussily voted to help Beecher pecuniarily. A proposition is made to issue scrip secured by future rents, but, as these would be worthless in case of Beecher's death, a difficulty is met at the outset. Another mortgage on the church is suggested. The suspension of his publishers is followed by news from Leipzig, the great book mart of Germany, that the trial has completely destroyed the sale of his "Life of Christ," and its publication has been suspended.

OBITUARY. Andrew Johnson died on Saturday morning, July 31, at half-past two o'clock, at his daughter's residence, in Carter county, Tennessee. He was unconscious from seven o'clock on Friday evening, and passed away in that condition. The funeral took place on Tuesday with military, civic and masonic honors.

Andrew Johnson, seventeenth President of the United States, was born in Raleigh, North Carolina, December 29th, 1808. His father was a carpenter, a sexton and porter of the state bank, and very poor. He died when Andrew was only four years of age. The future President obtained an school education whatever, and at the age of ten years was apprenticed to a tailor, with whom he worked for nearly six years. A gentleman was reading about the workmen in the shop where the boy was employed. Andrew desired to learn to read for the purpose of being able to read the law. He went to the reading of a limited number of books. In 1824, a few months before his apprenticeship expired, he was employed by a farmer to dig for iron ore in an old quarry on his farm, and ran away from Raleigh, going to Laurens County, Georgia, where he worked as a tailor. In 1828 he returned and worked as a tailor. In 1830 he was elected to the Tennessee legislature, and worked for a year at Greenville, where he was married. He then sought a more desirable home farther west, but returned and finally settled at Greenville. He was elected clerk of the court. Before he was twenty years old, in 1828 Johnson organized a workmen's party in Greenville. He was elected clerk of the court. hundred dollars. From that time to January, 1874, he conducted the Journal, weekly and daily, meeting it the best known of any of the newspapers in the county. From 1873 to within two weeks of his death he was a constant contributor to his columns. He was a strong writer of original ideas and cared little for popular applause, advocating what he thought right to say and do. While provoking many opponents none ever questioned his honesty of purpose. He is believed to be the first to suggest a plan for a national currency and published his plan in the Journal of December, 1857, sending copies of it to members of Congress, S. P. Chase being in the Senate at the time.

Afterwards when Chase was Secretary, he called his attention to the plan, when Chase admitted that it had now become a national necessity. The principal features of his plan were embodied in Mr. Chase's bill. He was the author of the Normal School system of this State. Always a proponent of the tariff with pen and speech to advance the cause. He proposed and organized the first tariff League in 1840. As a coal manufacturer, he was the foremost in the country, and has been designated by the Bureau of Statistics on several occasions as the most competent person to furnish information on the coal trade, when applied to by persons from abroad. He published during the war "Coal from now on," the most effective work on the subject extant.
