

CONCLUDED FROM FIRST PAGE.

not while I live. Your wife she cannot be, your mistress she shall not become. Nevertheless, as you say, in point of honor she belongs to you, yet while I hold my claim I still have something to gamble for, and we have not done with each other."

"These horrid words chilled his listener to the soul. Having spoken, the marquis locked the door and placed the key in his pocket."

"All now for my revenge," he continued, drawing two pistols from his pocket. "You see they are both alike and both unloaded. I will load one of them. Olympia shall, while her backs are turned, place them both on the table. You shall then choose, and we will both fire at the same moment. Should I kill you, my daughter returns with me to Italy. If you, on the contrary, kill me, Olympia is at liberty to give you her hand. She will care but little that you will have been the assassin of her father."

Le Roy would have spoken or left the house, but reading his design, the marquis anticipated him.

"If you take one step," he exclaimed, "or utter one word, I will fire upon you, and then upon Olympia."

At these words the young girl uttered a wild cry and fell fainting at his feet.

"Have you no mercy?" inquired Le Roy.

"None," responded Foscarini. "Since I must act I will do so." He at once leveled the pistols, his back turned from Le Roy. The young officer obedient to the order of the marquis, selected a pistol. Attaching them to a corner of a handkerchief they fired at the same instant.

Le Roy had won; but Olympia Foscarini lay dead beside her father.

PARAGRAPHIC.

A little girl and a boy, three or four years old, were playing on the ice, when she fell down and commenced to cry. Her brother ran up and soothingly whispered, "Don't cry! Thwear! Thwear! 'Thay damn!'"

An Iowa lady concludes an anti-suffrage letter as follows: "You may look at this matter in whatever light you will, but simpler it would not be to quarrel with the Almighty that we are not all men."

A Missouri aspirant to matrimony advertises that he will give three mules to any maiden who will wed him; which gives rise to the question, what respectable married woman would want such a four-in-hand?

"There was an old family feud between them," was what a female witness in a Chicago murder case said to a jury. A jurymen asked her if she did not mean "feud," and she asked him who was telling the story.

A young Tennessee lady recently died at the weight of 450 pounds. Everybody who attended the funeral was weighed down with great grief, and the pall-bearers felt as though they could scarcely stagger through it and live.

A man who was sentenced to be hung was visited by his wife, who said, "My dear, would you like the children to see you executed?" "No," replied he. "That's just like you," said she, "you never wanted the children to have any enjoyment."

An exchange defines a blunderbuss as kissing the wrong girl; just as though it were possible to be wrong in kissing any girl. A blunderbuss is for men to kiss one another, as Frenchmen do, or for girls to kiss one another, as they often do for want of a man to kiss them.

"Wake up, Judge, wake up; there's a burglar in the house!" said Mrs. Portly, in Brooklyn, to her husband, the other night. The Judge rolled out of bed, grasped his revolver, and opened the door to satisfy for the robber, then turning to his wife he said, "Come, Sarah, and lead the way. It's a mean man that will hurt a woman."

Two Irishmen on a certain occasion occupied the same chamber. In the morning one of them inquired of the other, "Dennis, did ye hear the thunder in the night?" "No, Pat; did it really thunder?" "Yes; it thundered as if heaven and earth would come together." "Why the deuce, then, did not ye wake me, for ye know I can't sleep when it thunders?"

A city chap visited the Shakers at Lebanon some time since, and as he was wandering through the village, encountered a stout hearty specimen of the sect, and thus accosted him: "Well, Broadbrim, are you much of a Shaker?" "Nay," said the other, "not overmuch, but I can do a little that way." So he seized the young man by the collar and nearly shook him out of his boots.

Thompson was boring a supper party with a most interminable yarn, a few evenings since. When one of the party broke in with, "I'll tell you what, Thompson, whoever told you that story did not tell you the whole of it." "Certainly he did," said the astonished Thompson; "I know every word of it." "Must be some mistake, Thompson," persisted his friend, "he never could have told you the end of it."

A person who represented that he was a clergyman presented himself at the office of a prominent real estate firm in Boston one day this week, and asked if the firm would give him a list of all the farms offered for sale and owned by widows. The query naturally arose whether he wanted to buy a widow or marry a farm.

A parent writes to us that he is annoyed and pained by his son staying out nights, and asks us if we can present a remedy for this rapidly growing evil. There are several remedies. The boy's spin can be broken with an ax, or he can be nailed to the floor with a red-hot railroad spike, driven through his abdomen, but the most effectual way is to compel him to wear patched clothes.

"Father," replied a Cairo girl, tears in her eyes, "you may jaw and jaw, and howl and rip and tear, but I'll marry John Stewart if I die for it." And the old man leaned back and realized that he might as well try to pull a locomotive up hill.
