—The Republican majority in Iowa is estimated at about 35,000. Large Republican gains in the Legislature are reported.

—In Nebraska, the Republican majority is estimated at 10,000, and it is believed that the new Constitution has been adopted by a very large majority.

—The total receipts of the Post-office Department for the year ending June 30 were $27,501,502, and its total expenditures $33,611,309, leaving a deficiency of $6,049,806.

—The latest returns from Ohio reduce the Republican figures, and the Democrats refuse to concede more than from 2000 to 3000 majority for Hayes. The Republicans claim a majority in both branches of the Legislature.

—Hon. Samuel E. Dimmick, Attorney General of Pennsylvania, died in Harrisburg Monday night. He arrived there on Tuesday, 5th inst., to attend the sessions of the Board of Pardons, and was then unwell. On Wednesday evening he was compelled to leave the meeting of the Board. His condition continued to grow worse, but was not alarming until Monday evening, a few hours before he died. It is supposed his disease was pneumonia.

—We see it stated that the close of a speech by an inflationist recently before an audience mostly of agriculturists one of them remarked as he stepped from the platform down among the voters: "General, we Yankees up here are in the habit of taking a practical view of things, and this one thing we confess our inability to comprehend. We can't see how by adding two gallows of water to a gallon of milk there will be any more cheese in it." The orator of the occasion rapidly passed out of the crowd.

—Ex-Governor Bigler, of this State, has written a long letter on the political situation, in which he holds gold and silver to be the best standard of value, and thinks a paper circulation redeemable therein the best currency for the country. While opposing inflation, he does not believe in forced resumption, and regards a return to specie payments in 1879 as an impossibility. The Phila. Ledger says: On this last point we are sorry to differ with the Ex-Governor. We see no insuperable difficulty in the Government's redeeming its legal tenders in coin as demanded at the time named, or even before.

—The controller of the currency has just issued the following circular: Dangerous counterfeits are in circulation of the denomination of $5 of the following banks: The First National Bank of Chicago, Illinois; The Traders' National Bank of Chicago, Illinois; the First National Bank of Paxton, Illinois, and the First National Bank of Canton, Illinois. Nearly the entire amount of the genuine $5 notes of these banks has been withdrawn from circulation and no additional issues will be made. The controller is desirous of retiring the whole amount from circulation, and national banks are requested to transmit to the Treasury for redemption all such notes as may come into their possession.

Agricultural Hall Wrecked.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 12.—At 11 o'clock this morning there was a great sensation at the Centennial grounds caused by the falling of the framework of Agricultural Hall into a mass of ruins. The building in its complete form is to be 820 feet in length by 416 feet in width, with a ground area of 7½ acres. At the time of the mishap, however, only one-third of the mere framework of the structure was up the contractor for the building, Mr. Philip Quigley, of Wilmington, Del., not having broke ground until the 4th of July last.

The framework of Agricultural Hall stood on the bend of the road between George's Hill and Belmont, a little northwest of the Horticultural Hall. There was a large force of workmen employed by Mr. Quigley in erecting the structure, and the skeleton of about one-third had been raised.

There was this morning the same activity as was customary at the site, and the timbers were rapidly raised in place. A pretty stiff wind was blowing, and some of the men noticed the framework at the northern section sway slightly in the wind, but they did not anticipate any danger, and kept on with their work. The wind gradually increased, without any further notice of the effect of the giant skeleton, when suddenly the people in that part of the grounds were stunned by a terrific crash, which, before they had fairly recovered from the shock, was followed by another. Those within view of Agricultural Hall saw a portion of its massive framework surging in the wind, and then fall, with a cracking thunder, in a ruin, and in a moment more the remainder came down a mass of ruins. The lamentable accident at once aroused the intensest excitement, and people rushed from all directions to the scene of the disaster. The workmen on the building—those who were not caught in their flight by the wreck and crushed in it—fled quickly from the place.

Those upon the section which finally gave way had no time to recover scarcely from the surprise of the first crash, ere the portion they were engaged upon was swept down by the wind, burying a number of them in its debris.

As quickly as possible an effort was made to extricate those who were known to have been caught in the fallen ruin. Their groans could be heard from various sections of the wreck of timber, and hundreds of hands went eagerly to the work of rescue.

The unfortunates were extricated from the debris, and it was discovered that none had been killed outright, as very many had feared, but that all had been seriously if not fatally injured.

It was impossible in the excitement of the moment to get the names and residences of the victims of this disaster, but it was definitely ascertained that only ten had been injured, and they are particularized as follows:

A man residing in the neighborhood of Broad and Arch sts. When he was brought out from under the timbers, the blood was gushing profusely from his mouth. He was internally and fatally injured and had a leg broken, and a serious injury to his back.

A man residing in the Twenty-ninth Ward, who had his leg crushed, his head mashed in upon one side, and one eye torn out.

Both of these men were conscious, and suffered the intensest agony.

There were six others, among them one colored man, who sustained very serious injuries.

Two had their legs crushed between heavy timbers.

Two received injuries upon the head and back.

One had his foot crushed.

One had his ankle broken.

Two others, one colored, with slight injuries.

There were wild reports about many more being injured and killed, but the above is the actual result of an investigation of the number of victims and the character of their injuries.

There was great difficulties in securing anything for the relief of the unfortunates, and half an hour elapsed before stretchers arrived, and the men were then conveyed to the hospitals for medical relief.

All of the injured were laboring men, and were at work under and within the immediate vicinity of the framework when it came down. The wonder is that they were not all crushed to death. The skeleton of the hall was of hemlock, and the timbers are said to have been split all to pieces, when the supports gave way and the mass of wood work came down.

The portion carried down by the wind had been raised during the past ten days, for Mr Quigley, before commencing the work of erecting the hall, got out all his timbers first, and with these ready, was rapidly setting up the framework structure. The wind blew with increasing strength, and there were none, before the accident, who thought its force was sufficient to carry down the structure.

Westervelt Sentenced!

PHILA., Oct. 9.—Wm. H. Westervelt, convicted of conspiracy in the abduction of Charlie Ross, was sentenced to seven years solitary imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary this morning. After the argument of the motion for a new trial this morning Judge Elcock directed that the prisoner should be brought into court.

It was not generally known that Westervelt would be in court to-day, and consequently there was but a meager attendance in the court room. Seated in the dock with the other prisoners, Westervelt chatted very freely with one of them, although his appearance indicated that he had broken down under the verdict of the jury.

He held a lengthy conversation with his counsel, Mr. Ford, and in this way he filled up the suspense until the arrival of Judge Elcock upon the bench, which was about 11:30 o'clock.

The crier then opened the court, and the Judge said that in the case of the motion for a new trial in behalf of Westervelt, he had carefully reviewed the reasons and found they were the same as had been made in objection to his rulings during the trial.

His rulings had been made after the fullest consideration, and he therefore overruled the motion for a new trial.

Westervelt having been placed in the smaller dock was directed to stand up, which he did, straightening himself considerably and the Judge then directed his remarks to him.

Prisoner at the bar, said the judge, after a trial lasting for a period of three weeks a jury of unusual intelligence and character has found you guilty of conspiring with Wm. Mosher and Jos. Douglass and others to kidnap and carry away, and after the abduction to harbor, conceal and detain the child, Charles Brewster Ross, and of consummating the aforesaid crime in pursuance of said conspiracy.

You have been acquitted of being a principal in the crime of kidnapping, harboring and concealing. Your case received the most patient consideration of the jury, and whilst the case of the Commonwealth was presented with extraordinary ability and persistency, it was at all times fair and dignified, such as becometh great lawyers and good public officers.

That you were defended by your counsel with great vigor and ability was equally pleasing to the court, and should be gratifying and satisfactory to you. They labored with a zeal and devotion which entitles them to great praise, for they protected and guarded you in all your rights. The court has fully considered your case, both as to the law pronounced upon the trial and the evidence submitted to the jury.

I have given it a calm conscientious review, and am fully satisfied with my rulings upon the law and the conclusion arrived at by the jury. It is such a verdict as I would have joined in had I been a juror. I need not dwell upon the enormity of the offense of which you have been convicted. You have had full time to realize its darkness and your own fate.

I had hoped ere this I should have been appealed to for a light sentence by some merciful cry, revealing something of the fate of Charlie Ross, but I have heard not even a whisper, nor beheld a ray of hope, and if the knowledge of his fate rests with you, then you become your own executioner. Justice calls loudly for some severe punishment, and it remains but for me to announce the sentence.

By an act of Assembly of 29th of February, 1875, the kidnapping of a child under 10 years of age is made felony, and punishable by a fine of not exceeding $10,000 and an imprisonment of not more than 25 years. Harboring and concealing a child is likewise made a felony, and punishable by a fine not exceeding $5,000 and an imprisonment not exceeding 15 years.

This act was passed since the commission of your offense, and there was no evidence in the cause which would justify a punishment as to you of harboring and concealing the child, or of conspiracy to do so, since the passage of the act.

The section of the penal code act of March 31st, 1860, relating to conspiracy, which inflicts a punishment of a fine not exceeding $500 and an imprisonment not exceeding two years does not apply to your case, because that is inflicted for the mere offence of conspiracy, without the consummation of any other crime, and relates only to "an unlawful act to the prejudice of another."

The forcible abduction of a child by the Jewish law was punished by death (Exod. xxi, chap. 16); as it was by the civil law; and by the common law of England by a fine imprisonment and the pillory. It was deemed a heinous crime, because it banished the person from his country and deprived the king of his subject, as in this case it deprives the Commonwealth of her citizen.

It is therefore more than the offense contemplated by the act of March 31, 1860, sec. 127. By sec. 178 of the same act (penal code), every felony misdemeanor or offense whatever not specially provided for by this act, is unpunishable as theretofore.

By act of Assembly of 5th April, 1790, all crimes not capital for which, by the laws then in force, "burning in the hand, cutting off the ears, nailing the ear or ears to the pillory, placing in and upon the pillory, whipping and imprisonment for life," was inflicted as a punishment, was changed to a punishment by solitary imprisonment at hard labor for a term not exceeding two years.

By an act of Assembly of April 4, 1807 the punishment was extended to an imprisonment not exceeding seven years, and by decisions of our Supreme Court the punishment for conspiracy to commit an offence cannot exceed that for the successful preparation of the same offence. You are, therefore, punishable under the act last cited.

The sentence of the Court is that you pay a fine of $1, the costs of prosecution, and that you undergo an imprisonment at solitary confinement at labor in the Eastern Penitentiary for the term of seven years, and that you stand committed until the sentence be complied with.

—Christian Fox aged 55, was run over and killed by a coal train while drunk, at Mount Carbon, Friday afternoon.

—A telegram from Lebanon, Pa., says that G. Dawson Coleman put one of the Lebanon furnaces in blast Wednesday, and that another will be put in blast as soon as it can be made ready. The North Cornwall and Bird Coleman furnaces are also preparing to start.

DR CRUMP, established for many years in Buffalo, by an entirely new system of medication, treats successfully Catarrh, Bronchitis, and Diseases of the Lungs, Liver and Kidneys, also Difficulties of a Confidential Nature, wherein skill and experience are required. Dr. Crumb has developed a practice which from its unparalleled success in thousands of cases many of a very aggravated character, is able to positively guarantee a perfect and permanent cure in every case he undertakes. He sends no Circulars or Treatises on these diseases to his patient, as it is undeniable that such knowledge is in general prejudicial, exercising an injurious effect by retarding and frequently counteracting a cure, tending to alarm the patient, which is the principal object of such promotions, and excites and exaggerates his fears as to the curability of his complaint. The Doctor requires simply a brief history of the case, and a candid plain statement of present symptoms—a thorough examination will then be made, and if considered remediable a sincere, conscientious opinion will be given promptly and such medicine as will be applicable will be sent by express, accompanied by full and explicit advice and directions.
