Taking a Situation.

"Well, girls," said my Uncle Barnabas, "and now what do you propose to do about it?"

We sat around the fire in a disconsolate semi-circle, that dreary, drizzling May night, when the rain pattered against the window panes and the poor little daffodils in the borders shook and shivered as if they would fain hide their golden heads once more in the mother-soil. My mother, Eleanor and I, the first, pale, and pretty, and silver-haired, with the widow's cap, and her dress of black bon basine and crape; the sweetest-looking old lady, I think, that I ever saw. Eleanor sat besides her, looking, as she always did, like a princess, with her dark eyes, Diana-like features, and hair twisted in a sort of coronal around her queenly head. While I, plain, homespun Susannah—commonly called, "for short," Susy—crouched upon a footstool in the corner, my elbows on my knees and my chin in my hands.

Uncle Barnabas Berkeley sat in the middle of the circle, erect, stiff and rather grim. He was stout and short, with a grizzled mustache, a little round bald spot on the crown of his head, and two glittering black eyes that were always sending their deaky lightnings in the direction least expected. Uncle Barnabas was rich and we were poor. Uncle Barnabas was wise in the ways of the world, and we were inexperienced. Uncle Barnabas was prosperous in all he did; while, if there was a bad bargain to be made, we were pretty sure to be ones to make it. Consequently, and as a matter of course, we looked up to Uncle Barnabas, and revered his opinions.

"What do we propose to do about it?" Eleanor slowly repeated, lifting her beautiful jetty brows.

"Yes, that's exactly it," said my mother, nervously; "because, Brother Barnabas, we don't pretend to be business women, and it's certain that we cannot live comfortably on our present income. Something has got to be done."

And then my mother leaned back in her chair with a troubled face.

"Yes," said Uncle Barnabas, "something has got to be done! But who's to do it?"

And another dead silence succeeded.

"I suppose your girls are educated?" said Uncle Barnabas. "I know I found enough old school-bills when I was looking over my brother's papers."

"Of course," said my mother, with evident pride; "their education has been most expensive. Music-drawing, use of the globe—"

"Yes, yes, of course," interrupted Uncle Barnabas. "But is it practical? Can they teach?"

Eleanor looked dubious. I was quite certain that I could not. Mme. Lenoir, among all her list of accomplishments, had not included the art of practical tuition.

"Humph!" grunted Uncle Barnabas. "Queer thing, this modern idea of education. Well, if you can't teach you can surely do something! What do you say, Eleanor, to a situation?"

"A situation?"

The color flattered in Eleanor's cheeks, ink pink and white apple blossom.

"I spoke plain enough, didn't I?" said Uncle Barnabas, dryly. "Yes, a situation."

"What sort of a situation, Uncle Barnabas?"

"Well, I can't hardly say, Part Servant, part companion to an elderly lady!" exclaimed the old gentleman.

"Oh, Uncle Barnabas, I couldn't do that."

"Not do it? And why not?"

"It's too much—too much!" whispered Eleanor, losing her regal dignity in the pressure of the emergency; "like going out to service."

"And this is precisely what it is!" retorted Uncle Barnabas, nodding his head. "Service! Why, we're all out at service, in one way or another, in this world!"

"Oh, yes, I know," faltered poor Eleanor, who, between her distaste for the proposed plan and her anxiety not to offend Uncle Barnabas Berkeley, didn't quite know what to say. "But I've always been educated to be a lady."

"So you won't take the situation, eh?" said Uncle Barnabas, starting up at a wily-washy little water-color drawing of Cupid and Psyche, an "exhibition piece" of poor Eleanor's, which hung above the chimney-piece.

"I couldn't, indeed, sir."

"Wages twenty-five dollars a month," mechanically repeated Uncle Barnabas, as if he was saying off a lesson. "Drive out every day in the carriage with the mistress, cat and canary to take care of, modern house with all the improvements, Sunday afternoons to yourself, and two weeks, spring and fall, to visit your mother."

"No, Uncle Barnabas, no," said Eleanor, with a little shudder. "I am a true Berkeley, and I cannot stoop to menial duties."

Uncle Barnabas gave such a prolonged sniff as to suggest the idea of a very bad cold in his head indeed.

"Sorry," said he. "Heaven helps those who help themselves, and you can't expect me to be any more liberal-minded than heaven. Sister Rachel, to my mother, 'what do you say?'"

My mother drew her pretty little figure up a trifle more erect than usual.

"I think my daughter Eleanor is quite right," said she. "The Berkeleys have always been ladies."

The Death of Rev. Joseph Barker.

This famous debater died at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Hamilton, Omaha, Nebraska, Sept. 15th. He was well known in England and in the United States as a preacher, author, lecturer and controversialist. He was born at Bramley, near Leeds, Yorkshire, England, May 11, 1805. His life was peculiarly a chequered one. At the early age of twenty years he became a Methodist preacher in England (new connexion). At forty years of age his views had become changed, and soon after he was the advocate of decidedly infidel principles. He visited this country, entertaining and promulgating these views about 1850, and with the Rev. Dr. J. F. Berg held a memorable discussion upon the "Authenticity of the Bible," in Concert Hall, January, 1854. Five years subsequent, in England, he again warmly expounded the doctrine of Christianity, returned in the ministry in the Methodist Church and continued to labor as he had strength and opportunity until his departure from life.

In a letter from England, addressed to the Rev. G. Collins, of this city, dated November, 1870, he thus refers to the dreary past: "I have trod the dreadful path, from beginning to end. I know it all. It is a weary and dismal road, and it leads to wretchedness and ruin. I have seen the terrible effects which infidelity produces on men's characters. I have had proofs of its deteriorating influence in my own experience. Its tendency is to utter debasement. I have read and studied both sides; and what is more, I have tried both, and the result is a full assurance that infidelity is madness, and that the religion of Christ is the perfection of wisdom and goodness."

"I think of my wanderings in the dark shades of doubt and unbelief with unspeakable sorrow. I would give a world if I could have my time to live again, that I might avoid the dreadful mistake I made in turning my back on Christ and His cause, and joining the ranks of his enemies."

Mr. Barker's health has been gradually failing for a year past. He spent last winter in Lowell, Mass., and the summer months in this city. He returned to Omaha about the 1st of August, where his daughter and two sons reside.

Herewith is appended his dying confession. A few days before his death he made a final arrangement of his affairs, and testifying that paralysis was approaching, he called his eldest son, together with Mr. Gilbert, his lawyer, and Mr. Kellom, one of his trustees, to his bedside and said:

"I feel that I am approaching my end, and desire that you should receive my last words and be witness to them. I wish you to witness that I am in my right mind and fully understand what I have just been doing; and dying that I die in the firm and full belief in Jesus Christ, and in the faith and love of His religion, as revealed in His life and works, as described in the New Testament; that I have an abiding faith in and love of God, as God is revealed to us by His Son Jesus Christ; and I die trusting in Jesus' infinite love and mercy, and in full faith of a future and better life. I am sorry for my past errors; but during the last years of my life I have striven to undo the harm I did, by doing all I was able to do, by showing the beauty and wisdom of the religion of His Son Jesus Christ. I wish you to write down and witness this, my last confession of faith, that there may be no doubt about it."

The Missouri sheriffs now allow the condemned prisoners to lie down in their coffins and see if they will fit, and permit them other privileges, such as seeing the scaffold built, feeling the rope, &c.

It is estimated that the total cost of the new buildings put up in Chicago, since the great fire, numbering between eighteen hundred and nineteen hundred, has been between $18,000,000 and $18,000,000.

A snake was killed in Arkansas recently, which measured twenty feet long, twenty-four inches around the girth, three or four inches between the eyes, and which made a track of eight and three-fourth inches.

Two bunches of grapes were exhibited at the recent fruit show at Edinburgh Scotland, one of which weighed twenty-six and a quarter pounds and the other twenty-five pounds. These are believed to be the largest bunches of grapes ever grown in Britain, and probably the largest ever grown.

The Visalia (Cal.) Delta, in speaking of the drawbacks in sheep raising, says that many herds of sheep are driven from the mountains to the valleys, where the feed is already almost completely exhausted. There is a fair chance for 200,000 sheep to starve in this county this fall if they are not fed.
