How Advertising Affects Business. The man who advertises his business, if what he offers for sale is honestly what he represents it to be, or what it ought to be, is constantly assisted in his business by those who have been attracted to him and tested him. A buyer has read his advertisement, and gone to his store or work shop, or warehouse, whatever it may be, and tried what was recommended. If it has satisfied him he is pleased and recommends it to his neighbor, who is likely to go to the same place and tell his neighbors in turn.

Burglaries. On Thursday morning, about three o'clock the residence of Mr. Fritz Miller, saloonist, on Bank Street, this borough, was entered and robbed. The entrance was effected by pushing out the key from the outside, and unlocking the door with a duplicate, at the front porch entrance, when the thief proceeded to the bedroom of Mr. Miller, and captured the pantaloons hanging on the head-post of the bedstead. Mrs. Miller was awakened just in time to see the bare-footed scoundrel leave the room with his booty in his hand, and alarmed her husband, but too late to make a capture. The pants were found in the rear of Bank Street and near the R. R. track, minus the $100 which had been placed by Mr. M. in the pocket the night previous. We learn that there is a clue to the perpetrators of this burglary, but up to this writing no arrests have been made.

Some time during Wednesday night or early Thursday morning, the residence of Mr. M. W. Raudenbush, at Packerton, was entered, and a number of articles stolen, among them a trunk, which was carried over on to the railroad and rifled of its contents. We have heard of no arrests being made in this case.

The Coal Trade. There is no new feature in the anthracite coal trade. There is an overstock of coal and the suspension of mining which now characterizes the trade was a work of necessity. There is no adequate demand for consumption and no convenient places for storage. Suspension was, therefore, inevitable. It will continue for one month at least, at the end of which time the rates for the trade will be determined upon, and production will be commenced when the market warrants it. Prices will not be advanced, nor will coal be made scarce with any view. When the demand for coal quickens from the revival of the iron trade or any other cause, coal will come into market in liberal supply. We understand that the representatives of the several anthracite coal interests were in session on Friday at the office of the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company, New York. A committee of three was appointed to draw up rates for the reversion of the combination during 1878, the committee to report early in January. It is understood that no serious talk is taken relative to curtailing the output. The companies, it is thought, will settle upon an amicable agreement for the business of 1878 - 1879.
