FRONTIER LIFE.

Several years since, when I was quite young man-and gray is now silverlog my hair-I had occasion to visit the far West in Government employ, with a party of surveyors. The na-ture of our errand, our numbers, and the elaborate proparations we had male against any hostile, demonstrations, in-sured us from any molestation, save in a few rare instances; yet in that wild country it was impossible that we should remain long without witnessing many scenes not familiar in law-abiding and cultivated districts. To be sure we were not beyond the pale of law-that is, there were certain officers, widely scattered, who occasionally abot down some drunken desperado, if his friends were not too numerous, but beyond such heroic acts they sellom exercised the powers they were supposed to possess. Generally, each separate com-munity had a recognized leader, some man more muscular and reckless than his fellows, and who by virtue of these qualities had a certain number of followers, who were ready to see that his find the shooting no more accurate. Inwill was the ruling power in that vicinity. Of course such men were the real law-makers, and they were very seldom opposed or molested. uch a one was Jack Dunlaw. Jack's Rann y, and Jack had made much the headquarters were at the station on the Overland Mail route where we The young man took his place, and raised his ritle, which was considerably chanced to be located for a few weeks while surveying in that vicinity, and shorter than any of the others. we had a good opportunity to witness a "Look here, youngster," growled Jack, with a wink to his admirers, most interesting incident in his experience, which transpired while we were there. In appearance he was formid-able enough, as we saw him on the morning after our arrival. Fully six feet six inches in height, with long arms and legs, slightly stooping, with a ponderous frame, immense masses of hair and beard, clothing in keeping with his general appearance, and neither over-cleanly or attractive, a

He can't hit the board next time !" cried Jack I saw from his manner that he was getting excited and angry; but Stephen reloaded his weapon in the most unconcerned manner imaginable. As he was about to fire, Jack walked toward the target to mark the effect of the shot. It was given as promptly as the first, and to the surprise of every one, it struck almost exactly in the centre of the huli's-eye. But without waiting to hear the result, Stephen turned to reloa i his piece. With a stride like that of an enraged

"The dask belongs to Mr. Ranney," he said. " Please let him have it ' "The flask belongs to me." retorted Jake. "His shootin' war all acciden-He only happened to hit what he tal. did. But then, he ken have the flask if he can git it, or you either."

Tarbox bit his lip, and looked to the other members of the party, undecided ho v to act. Seeing his irresolution Ranney stepped forward, and said :

"Don't trouble yourself. Mr Tarbox, The flask is mine, and I will see to getting it."

"You will, ch?" snarled the bully, "Git away from me—out of arm's reach —or I'll smash you like a roast tater !"

Thus speaking the giant swong his fists about, but the young man did not move. Instead he received a blow upon the head which knocked away his hat, and seemed to change his whole nature to that of a young lion. With a strength and agility wholly unlooked for he dealt the giant a fearful bow full upon the nose, which knocked him to the ground, and deluged the uncomely face and beard with torrents of blood. There was a momentary struggle upon the ground after the bully fell, and then Stephen stepped back a pace or two.

In a moment the rufhan was upon his feet again, and with a fearful curse man whose three shots made the shortest string, measuring from the he placed his hand where he expected to find a revolver. But it was gone. centre of the bull's eye, was to receive to find a revolver. But it was gone. Then he sought for his knife, but that too was missing. The young man had taken the precaution of removing them, so that now the two stood upon equal ground. But what a contrast | Nine been quite curious to see how these two nches in height the bully towered above change in the young man's deportment, He spoke but little, and when the list his antagonist, while in actual weight he was more than twice his equal.

was arranged for the precedence, volun-tarily took the last place. Then folding There was no parley or hesitation, Finding himself weaponless Jack rushed for the young man, and would have crushed him in a deadly grasp, but the young man did not wait for the process. A quick, fierce blow, falling just where been fired it was found that one of his bullets. the other had fallen staggered the rashad struck within an inch of the centre, cal, and before he could see what had become of the man he suppose ' already half an inch farther removed. "Four inchest" the surveyor anin his grasp, a tremendous crack in the ear brought him again to the ground. nounced, after carefully measuring the Again he scrambled to his feet, and distance of the several shots. "Yas," growled Jack, throwing himself upon a pench; "I'll wait here again he was knocked down by a single reverberating blow. The third time he arose, before he could wipe the blood till you heat that, some on yer, and when from his eyes sufficiently to distinguish yer dew it ye kin take that ther little his antagonist the hard earth again be-came his bed. The others fired in their several turns,

This time he did not rise immediately. It was patent to every one before this stage of the encounter that he was for once over-matched, and at last that fact seemed to have become clear to his own mind. Drawing the flask from his pocket he cast it upon the ground muttering savagely :

"There's yer old flask! Take it if yer want it so had !"

Stephen stepped to the spot where the coveted prize lay and picked it up, placing it beside his ride. Then turnplacing it beside his rifle. ing again to the discomfitted bully, who had now risen to his feet, he continued. "Jack Dunlaw, I am not done with

"you'd better have a pop-gun; that wouldn't hart anybody, and you'd be jist as likely tew hit the mark as yer will with that boy's playing " you yet. A few days ago you brutally insulted Cora Russell. I could have Stephen made no reply, but placing his weapon in rest, bowed his cheek to shot you dead and I should have done it had I not pitied you. Now you can the brech, and the next moment the sharp report rangout. "In the edge of the bull's eve, half orever or die where you stand ! This take your choice, go, and on your knees quarrel is not of my seeking, but now that you have begun it take your choica. I give you three minutes to decide." A half-dozen watches were produced and the attention of the party was divided between their slowly-moving hands and the excited group before us. At first it seemed as though Jack desired to renew the light. He looked around upon those who had been his confederates, but their sympathy had gone, and it was apparent that Stephen Ranney had in a moment become the hero of the occasion. Jack's eyes, too, were nearly closed from the energetic blows he had received, and his couage, if any he had ever possessed, seemed to have gone entirely. A nod a watch closed and returned to the pocket of its owner. Not a change of muscle or expression passed over Stephen's features as he remarked: "The time is up, Jack Dunlaw; will you live or die ?' Jack looked around once more and plaintively asked : "What do you say, boys ?" "Do as he tells yer," replied one who and been Jack's most devoted supporter in times past. The last hope seemed to leave the contemptible giant. In a voice weak and wavering he said : "I'll loave, that orter satisfy ye." "You will do what I said, or-" The sentence remained unspoken, Jack Duniaw bowed his head, and walked meekly away to make the re-quired apology.1 did not follow, though many did. Five minutes later 1 saw him, the blood washed from his face, walking slowly away into the forest. We did not see him again, nor did ha return to that station to my knowledge. The favor which Jack lost was transferred to Stephen, and a fine village, which has since grown up there, bears to-day the stamp of his quiet energy and courage.

MRS. M. GUTH, Weissport, Pa. A pril 3-wi

his belt as he walked about the station Jack was certainly the man to intimidate any person of miderate nerves.

For many years he had been recog-nited as the leading spirit in that vicinity, and from that position he had grown independent of all retraint save his own will. He had a chosen band of follow-ers who were ready to support him in every villainous undertaking. We were not long kept in waiting before some of his peculiarities were brought to our notice.

The keeper of the station, Frank Russell, was a medium sized man, some forty years of age, who had recently come to the place, bringing with him a family consisting of one daughter, his wife, and a young man who had been in his employ several years, and who was the accepted lover of the daughter Cora. Stephen Ranney was his name, a very quiet, gentlemanly appearing young man, some five feet nine inches high, and weighing at a moderate esti-uate a hundred and fifty pounds. He soldom spoke unless addressed, when his words were brief and to the point. On the morning following our arrival, while the chief engineer of our corps was preparing the work for the day, the remainder of the party, after examining their instruments and putting everything in readiness for service, disposed ourselves about the station to wreathing ourselves in vapor, and longing for a day or two of rest, in strode Jack Duniaw, and demanded a dram, of whiskey. The barkeeper produced of whiskey. The barkent a who was al-the beverage, and Jack, who was al-ready more than excited by the pota-tions of vile liquor which he bad swal-lowed, turned it down with a gargie. Just as he lowered the tin cup which served instead of a tumbler, Cora Russell entered the room, looking for Ler father.

"Here, gal, give us a kiss !" Jack exclaimed, as he caught sight of her. Alarmed at his brutal manner, the girl turned to leave the room, but be-fore she could do so the bully had caught and kissed her repeatedly with his liquor-tumed and tobacco stained lips.

As she broke from his grasp and escaped at length, he turned to the bar again, and with some beastly remarks, threw down a coin and sauntered out, those of his admirers present laughing heartily as he left the place. As the scene progressed I sprang elephant, Jack Dunlaw moved up to the side of his successful competitor

"Don't ye dar' do that ag'in !" he hissed between his shut jaws. " If yer do. 'twill be a hard day for yer. Now mark what I tell yer! I ain't going to fool around no upstart like you. Ye've made a lucky hit twice; now let that end it ?"

The young man made no answer; but I aaw his cheeks become a shade paler, and his hand a trifle less steady as he rammed home the bullet. Then, with lips tightly compressed, and eyes fixed upon the target, he dropped upon one knee, and leveled his rifle

"Now don't yer make another mis-take !" was Jac's last admonition, accompanied by a shake of the fist so close to the young man's face that I began to feel like grasping the bully from behind and dragging him from the scene.

The third shot sped as the others had done, and then the young man sprang to his feet, dropping his rifle to ground in a manner which showed that patience had nearly ceased to be his ruling virtue. Still I could not anticipate the scenes which were to follow. The last bullet had struck just out-side the bull's eye, and after carefully measuring the three, Tom Tarbox, who had offered the prize, and kept the measurements, stepped up among the crowd now gathered, and said :

" Gentlemen, Mr. Ranney has made the best record, his three shots measuring but two inches; so to him I give the flask, according to agreement."

He reached forth the prize as he spoke, but before the young man could take it, Jake snatched it from the surveyor's hand and thrust it into his pocket. No one anticipated such a taovement, and it was some moments before Tarbox recovered his self-possession so as to speak.

A single manufacturer of perfumery Hermann, at Cannes, use annually 140,000 lbs. of orange blossoms, 128-120. 000 ibs. of acada-flowers, 140,000 lbs. of rose-leaves, 32,000 lbs. of jasmine-flowers, 20,000 lbs. of violets, 8,000 lbs. tuberoses, besides rosemary, mint, thyme, lemons, citrons, etc., in propor-tionate quantities. Nice and Cannes together consume annually over 20 tons of violets ; Nice alone 190 tons of orange blossoms ; Cannes over 150 tons, of acacta-flowers.
