

Camel's Hair Shawl Swindlers.

A gaily little Frenchman called at a drug store in the western addition yesterday and inquired in passable English if there was a lady residing in the vicinity who spoke French. He was directed to the house of an attorney not far distant. There he proceeded, and Mrs. Blank was summoned to the door, and the stranger, all smiles and bows, stated that he was an officer of a French vessel lying in the harbor and was obliged to sail at three o'clock. He has an elegant camel's hair shawl which he had purchased in a foreign port for $80, which would have cost another $100. He exhibited a neatly done up package and proceeded to display what appeared to be an elegant shawl. He said he had been unable to find the lady for whom it was purchased, and not wishing to carry it away would dispose of the article for the trifling sum of $60. Now, Mrs. Blank was wanting a camel's hair shawl, but, like a prudent lady, said she would prefer consulting her husband before buying. With the consummate art of an accomplished salesman he dwelt upon the beauty and value of the goods and finally offered to take $20 on account and allow the balance to remain unpaid until his return. The lady could not resist such a tempting offer, so handing him a double eagle she secured the prize. The obliging gentleman complimented her on her good fortune, and with a low bow took his departure. When left alone the better judgment of the purchaser led her to reflect that there might possibly be something wrong in the transaction. Perhaps the shawl had been stolen, or perhaps it was an inferior article. Hastily putting on her hat and walking dress, she took the article to a large dry goods house down town, where she usually traded, and inquired its value. "My dear Mrs. Blank," said the proprietor, "are you sold, too?" He then said that the shawl was a first rate imitation, and that the same fellow had sold a large number in the city under similar representations. The article was left at the store to be sold for her account. She informing her husband that she didn't think a camel's hair shawl would become her and they are not fashionable anyway. It may be safe to predict that when Mrs. Blank next airs her French it will not be to a fascinating Gaul who is anxious to sell a shawl worth $100 for $60 and be content with 33 per cent. deposit.—San Francisco Bulletin.

Flavor of Eggs.

This is what the Southern Plantation says on the flavor of eggs: "There is a very great difference in the flavor of eggs. Hens fed on clear, sound grain, and kept on a clean grass run, give much finer flavored eggs than hens that have access to stables and manure heaps, and eat all kinds of filthy food. Hens feeding on fish and onions flavor their eggs accordingly, the same as cows eating onions or cabbage, or drinking offensive water imparts a bad taste to the milk or butter. The richer the food the higher the color of the eggs. Wheat and corn gives eggs the best color, while feeding on buckwheat makes them colorless, rendering them useless for some confectionary purposes."

Whilst visiting the Centennial Exhibition, Vineland can be visited at small expense.
A paper containing full information, will be sent upon application to CHARLES K. LANDIS, VINELAND, N. J. Free of cost.
The following is an extract from a description of Vineland, published in the NEW YORK TRIBUNE, of the well known Agriculturist, John Robinson:
All the farmers were of the 'old to do' sort, and some of them, who have turned their attention to fruit and market gardening, have grown rich. The soil is from granite from sandy or clayey, and surface soil is light, intersected with small streams and occasional wet meadows, in which deposits of peat or peat moss are abundant, sufficient to fertilize the whole upland surface. After it has become exhausted of its natural fertility, it is certainly one of the most extensive fertile lands, in an equal level position, and suitable condition for plant raising, that we know of this side of the Western prairies. We found some of the oldest farms apparently just as profitably productive as when first cleared of forest fifty or a hundred years ago.
The principal reason soon discovered the cause of this continued fertility. The whole country is a marine deposit, and all through the soil we found evidence of calcareous substances, generally in the form of indurated calcareous nodules, showing many ridges, in the form of smooth shells, at the tertiary formation, and this salutary substance is scattered all through the soil, in a very concentrated form, and in the exact condition and most assimilable by such plants as the farmer desires to cultivate.
