THE TRAMPS' PARADISE.

CAMPS OF IDLE VAGRANTS IN THE NEW JERSEY SWAMPS.

During the past week hordes of tramps have passed through Newark and Elizabeth en route either to New York or Philadelphia. They travelled generally in pairs or threes, but at times ten or twelve were seen together. Some were respectably dressed and carried valises, but the major portion were very rough-looking, ragged, and fithy vagrants. Since the first of April these nomads have slept in barns, beneath haystacks, or under the shade of the trees, and have levied contributions on the barnyards of the farmers for their subsistence. At New Brunswick, hundreds of tramps who won't work, and know the country, leave the railroad and walk along the Trenton turnpike, which pentrates one of the finest farming districts in the State, and is fringed almost its entire length with noble oak and elm tree. Under these trees they find shade during the hot days and resting places at night. The farms, on either side, are visited by them, and if their demands are not complied with, a barn is burn-ed or a hay-tack fired at night in revenge. Such has been the terror in-spired by tramps in this section of New Jersey that guards are kept on the more exposed country seats at night, and vigilance committees have been organized for the mutual protection of property owners. But a month ago a party of eleven tramps stopped at the residence of a well to-do country grocer, near Penn's Neck, Middlesex county, and after parleying with his wife for victuals for the crowd, forcibly entered the house and carried away almost every-thing of value that they could lay their hands on They were pursued to the outskirts of Princetown where they disappeared in a dense belt of timber skirting the Raritan Canal.

The main retreat of the tramps, this side of New Brunswick, is in the groves and swamps bordering the Pennsylvania Railroad, a short distance above Waverly station. As this point is nearly midway between Elizabeth and Newark, the officers of both cities disclaim jurisdiction over it, and the tramps, recognizing it as neutral grounds, have taken possession. Night after night during the past four months their camp fires have lighted up the swamp, and crowds of males and females have held carnival beneath the trees. Tramps of every nationality, age, and condition resort to this rendez-vous, and the farmers of the adjacent district have suffered so severely from their depredations that they have de-termined to take the matter into their own hands, and drive out the marau-ders. The Pennsylvania Railroad Company has also suffered from their piracies and lawlessness, as new and old ties have been burned, telegraph poles have been injured, and trains have been stoned by some of the drunken miscre-A few nights ago at last thirty of these outcasts were congregated in and around a blazing log fire far in among the trees in this swamp. Interspersed among the crowd were five hicous-looking women, one of whom is known to almost all the station house keepers between Jersey City and Philadelphia as "Red Mary," so called on account of a huge red tumor on the side of her face. Sitting close beside her was a station house "bummer," known as Sailor Joe, or "Bow-wow," a sobriquet applied to him on account of his imitative powers. One of his peculiar yelps while passing a farm yard at night, it is said, will set every dog in the neighborhood to howling, and he is further distinguished as one of the most adroit thieves on the road. In close proximity to this interesting couple, busily engaged in frying a piece of bacon in the copper bottom of a broken tea kettle, was a tramp known to the police as "Nosey Mulligan," formerly a Newark vegetable hawker, but now one of the laziest and most desperate of a gang of pretty thieves who make these swamps their rendezvous. Not far from him sat four men playing "seven up" for pennies, and scattered around in various positions were a dozen or more, chatting or making preparations for "turning in" for the night. Empty tomato cans, ham bones, broken crackers, and feathers, the debris of former feasts, were scattered on the ground. A short distance above, cooking their evening meal, were several strange tramps, ragged, filthy, and, judging from their language, "down on" the from their language, "down on" the crowd below. One of the party, dir-tier and more piratical in appearance than his companions, was pointed out as "French Lou." He said that he had just reached "the retreat" the night before, and had been robbed of a silver watch by the other gang, pointing over his shoulder. "Wait and see," said another, in a significant way, "if we don't get square yet wid dem fellows. We'll put up a job on 'em that'll make 'em sick.'' When questioned as to work and the prospects, the Frenchman -who spoke excellent English-re-plied, "Work! to hell with it. What do we care for work when there's plen-ty to eat without it?" "That's so," chimed in another. "It's no use for us to attempt to work; we couldn't get any if we tried. Down in Philadelphy, the other day, I was arrested and locked up for asking for work, and do you think I'll run that risk again? Why, feel it. Talk about hard times, why these are just bully !"

" How about the coming winter?" The tramps made no reply for a min-nte or so, when a little dried up fellow answered, "We'll get along well enough. We understand our business, and if there isn't hot times in the big cities by Christmas, I'm a fool."

"Tain't going to be like it was last winter, you can just bet your bottom dollar," said another. "We'll have something to live on; and if we have to fight for it, why we'll do that."

The night following, a Troy moulder, while walking along the railroad track, with a little bundle in his hand, was accested by three tramps from the swamp, who demanded his money. The moulder knocked the spokesman down; but before he could realize his peril, was in turn knocked down, and was robbed of $1.50 -all the money he pos-sessed. Two of his assailants even wanted to take his bundle, but were pursuaded by the third of the party to let him retain it, and he was suffered to go on his way upon giving his pro-mise not to tell the Elizabeth police.

"The retreat," as it is known to the tramps, is silent during the day, its regular denizens being out on begging tours in adjacent towns or cities, or among the farmers in the vicinity. Toward dusk they may be seen returning, "dropping in" from the railroad track and country road, singly, or in pairs, and are jest sight of in the thicket which screens their haunts from the A farmer who lives in the city road. estimates that, since the commence-ment of the present year, fully one thousand chickens, young turkeys, and geese have been stolen from himself and his neighbors; their fences have been broken down, their cows milked in their pastures, and, in several instances, their orchards stripped of the green fruit. They are now apprehensive that the corn in the fields will suffer unless prompt action for the driving away of the tramps is inaugurated.

Great Island, a heavy-timbered, secluded spot, a half mile or so away, and but a short distance below the Union county poorhouse, is another favorite camping place for tramps, some of whom, it is said, are supplied with victuals by employees of the poorhouse. Since the Pennsylvania Railroad Company appointed special policeman to arrest tramps when found on freight or passenger trains, but few have patronized that line, preferring to walk rather than be arrested and lodged in jail for ninety days as vagrants. As the city authorities of Newark, Elizabeth, Rahway, New Brunswick, and Trenton have de cided to give the tramps no shelter in the station houses during the coming winter, it is feared that their depredations will be greater and bolder than ever before. - Cor. of the N. Y. Sun.

Hendricks' Letter of Acceptance.

INMANAPULE, July 21, 1876—Gentlemen: I have the nonor & methodedge the receipt of your communication. In which you have formally notified me of my nominates by the National Democratic Convention, at St. Louis as the candidate for the office of Vice President of the United States.

It is a nomination which I had petitive expected nor desired, and yet I recognize and appropulate the field moore done me by the Convention. The closes of such a body, pronounced with such measual manimity, and accoust paried with such measual manimity. And accoust and conditions of the convention of control of the convention of public duty, that i now second the normal control of the convention of the c sense of public city, that how access the nomination instead askall anothe the judgment of my country rice. It would have been maposeuble for me to accept the nomination of the concention. I am granthed, therefore, to be able unequivocally to declare that I acree in the principle, approve the policies and symbolic with the purpose enumerated in that platform.

On the concents yetem of expedients must be reformed Good and Silver are the real standard of values and our national currency will and be a perfect medium of exchange until it shall be convertable at the peakage of the holier. As I have heretoire said, no one desires a reach to specie payments more earnestly than 1 to, that I do not believe that it will or can be reached in harmony with the interests of the people by artificial measures for the contraction of the currency any more than I believe that wealth or permanent prosperity can be created by an inflation of the currency.

The laws of finence cannot be disregarded with impurity The finence the surface of the excendent, if indiced it deserves the nam of policy at all, has been in disressard of these laws, and, therefore, has disturbed compercial and business confidence as well as himsered a return to apact; payment, one teature of the require payment. One teature of that policy was the resumption clause of the set of 1875, which has embarassed the country by the a suchpain of a compulsory reamption for which no peoplarities of that the business of the set of 1875, which has embarassed the country by the a such payment.
