Letter from Mauch Chunk.

Mauch Chunk, Pa., Aug. 17, 1876. Since politics are in almost everybody's mouth, and the infection is contagious, I hope you will excuse me should I, in abscence of almost any other topic of interest, select political topics for my text of to-day's. That during the last few weeks candidates have turned up rather sparingly, you know, but whether this apparent reluctance to announce themselves springs from a sense of modesty, a disinclination to serve the public, or a dread of possible defeat and the inevitable expenses connected with candidacies, it would be hard to tell. The candidature of Messrs, Durling and Harvey, both of whom are up for renomination as members of Assembly, forms, of course, the all engrossing subject of conversation, and that in this connection 1 am unable to give you, of Lehighton, any encouragement, you must excuse. But from what I can learn, with three-fourths of the party opposed to the project, a renomination of the two gentlemen mentioned is more than doubtful. Differently it appears to be with Mr. Thomas Kemerer, the very efficient and accommodating Prothonotary, who will not only be reindorsed by the Republican Nominating Convention, but will also worry his Democratic competitor more than any other candidate that could be put forward. Indeed should be eventually be defeated by the opposing candidate, it will be by a majority more insignificant than any that has yet defeated a nominee in Carbon county. So you perceive though Lehightonians may fail to return their favorite to the Legislature, there appears to be a possibility of reelecting at least one of Lehighton's worthy sons to office. And "better is a handful, and peace and quictness therewith, than both hands full and vexation of spirit."

Yours, etc., ITEMS.

Great indignation is felt by some of the citizens of Upper Mauch Chunk, at a party of colored gentlemen who almost nightly sit in a certain pathway, greatly to the annoyance of ladies. If, one of these days, you should learn of a mishap to some of the colored gents in question, you may easily imagine the cause.

The plank-walk between this place and Upper Mauch Chunk is in a miserable condition. Property owners or town council should attend to it at For a high-toned place as ours mee. 'tis a disgrace that such things should be suffered to be.

Our neighbors across the river are just now, greatly agitated over the ditios of some stray goats that have lately shown their partiality for Centennial trees by barking them. To prevent a repetition of the offense, 'twere best to kill the "varmints."

business at Squire Laurish's office is unusually brisk. "'Tis an ill wind that blows nobody good." Hon. James Harvey, afflicted with cancer of the jaw, on Monday last went to Philadelphia for medical advice. Major Robert Klotz is about canvass

When will the different political county conventions meet ? is now the most important concern of asp rants for office. Be patient, gents, they'll be held soon enough to disabuse the minds of some of you 1

One of East Mauch Chunk's most worthy citizens, while at Philadelphia, sight-seeing, a few days ago, on pass-ing a cheap clothing store found himself suddenly arrested by an Iraelitish drummer, who informed him that within all wool French cloth suits could be bought for six dollars. So in he went, selected a suit, paid for it-coat, vest and pantaloons-ordered them done up, and in high glee he left the premises, congratulating himself upon the very thriving bargain he made. How Le would "astonish the natives" on his return, and what a swell he might cut with his six dollar suit on the streets of East Mauch Chunk. But his "milk soon soured," for just imagine the gentleman's disappointment, when, on his return home, he opened the package to find that instead of the all wool French cloth which he had purchased, it contained a black shoddy vest, and pantaloons of the same color and material.

He now swears vengeance to the city Jew, and has sent forth his ultimatum, threatening to prosecute the party im-plicated in case the suit selected by him s not forwarded immediately to his ad Whether his threatenings will dress. tetch the suit, remains to be seen. We doubt it.

A Sanguinary Fight.

HAMBURG, Pa., Aug. 15 .- About a year ago a party of men and women inhabited an old, tumble down farm house in the woods between Pottstown and Lancaster. A murder was committed there one night last spring du-ring a drunken carousal, a woman called Pretty Margaret being the victim. Who was the murderer has never been ascertained. The "Forty Thieves," as they were called, had committed many lawless acts, including highway and house robberies and incendiarism ; but owing to the fear and inefficiency of the constabulary they had not been pun-ished. Immediately after the murder, however, a vigilance committee made a descent upon the house and drove the inmates from the neighborhood. "The Forty Thieves" went into York county, and settled in the hilly region, where they had a large cave for a habi-tation, and kept the region in excitement by their predatory incursions. Last Sunday they held a drunken carousal, which terminated in a terrible tragedy. One of the men, Big Mike, accused the Chief, Bill Pratt, of unfairness in the division of plunder that had been stolen the night before. This led to a fight between them, eventually involving nearly the entire party. At the close of the affray, which was only stopped because of sheer exhaustion upon the part of some of the parti-cipants, three of the men had been stabled to death. They were known as Patsy Burns, Dutchman Green and Greasy Bob. Big Mike, the chief, and two women were severely wounded. Nothing was known in the outside community of the tragedy until Monday night, when children, who had been out gathering berries in the woods, brought the news that there were three dead men among the bushes. It was soon learned that the remaining members of the band had quit their home, leaving behind them the unburied dead, and Big Mike, who expired soon after relating the particulars of the fight. The murdered men were buried where they lay, and preparations are being made for the capture of the murderers, who are supposed to have gone in the direction of the Cumberland Valley, with the intention of escaping into Maryland or West Virginia

A robbery, committed at the Asa Packer residence on Monday night, by which Miss Fannie Skeer is said to be the heaviest loser, still continues the all absorbing topic of conversation. The booty taken, consisting of jewelry, gold, and sliverware, is roughly estimated at twelve to fifteen hundred dollars. The pocket books of Misses Mary Packer and Fannie Skeer, containing $27 were also taken. No clue, but roobery supposed to have been committed by persons well posted about the premises.

Since coal is beginning to move more freely, the Central R. R. Co.'s employees look more cheerful.

Thursday's pic-nic of the St. Patrick's C. B. of Nesquehoning was well attended and, no doubt financially successful.
