In an Ecstacy Because his Wife was Hanged.

Sir Walter Scott used to be fond of telling the following story of his cousin "Watty." Watty aforesaid was a midshipman in the navy. On a certain occasion he and his messmates had gone on shore at Portsmouth and overstaid their leave, besides spending their money and running up a bill at a tav-ern at the Point. Their ship made signal for sailing, peremptorily calling all hands on board, but when they would have started the landlady said

"No. gentlemen, you cannot escape without paying your reckoning." And to confirm her words she called a ballif and his posse to take charge of them. The midshipmen felt they were in a bad scrape and begged to be released.

"No, no," said the resolute matron,
"I must be satisfied in some way. You must be a are, gentlemen, that you will be totally ruined and disgraced if you do not go on board in time.

They groaned bitterly, for they knew she spoke the truth. "Well," she continued, "I'll give you all a chance. I am so circumstan-ced here that I cannot well carry on my business as a single woman, and I must contrive somehow to have a husband, or, at all events, I must be able to pro-duce a marriage certificate. Now, the only terms upon which I will set you all free are, that one of you will consent to marry me! I don't care a snap which it is; but, by all that is holy, one of you I will have for a husband, or else you all go to jail and your ship sails without you."

The vixen was not to be coaxed nor entreated. Tears and prayer were of no avail. After a time the poor middies agreed to draw lots. Walty drew the matrimonial slip of doom. No time was to be lost. The marriage license was speedily procured and they went to the nearest church, where the knot was tied. The bride on her return to her tavern gave them a good dinner, with plenty of wine, and then sent them off in her wherry. Of her own accord she had proposed to her husband, that Of her own accord as the marriage certificate was her chief pride, he was at liberty to live apart from her forever if he chose. The ship sailed, and the young gen-tlemen religiously adhered to the oath of secrecy they had made previous to drawing lots. A year after, at Jamaica, a file of Fnglish papers reached the mid-shipman's berth, and Watty, who was carelessly looking them over was attracted by the account of a robbery and murder, and the execution of the culprits at Portsmouth. Suddenly leaping to his feet, and waving the paper above his head, forgetful of his oath in the excitement of ecstacy, he cried out "Thank Heaven! My wife is hanged."

The Main Mirror gives the testimony of a New Hampshire boy, now a resident of Wisconsin, a fine scholar, a granuate of Dartmouth, and a law student in Merrimac county, who, just previous to his admission to the bar, took a severe cold, which rendered him very deaf, and no medical skill was able to restore his hearing. The affliction compelled him to give up his chosen profession, and be went west very much broken down in spirits. For ten years he has been farming, cultivating about 200 acres of prairie land, and, as he expressed it, making a good living, and salting down something every year. And he declares that if, knowing what he now knows, he was to begin his life over again, he do just as he was com-pelled to do so unwillingly ten years ago ; that is, he would throw aside his profession and settle down upon a farm. Said he, " there isn't much glory on a farm, but you get a good sure living. You are your own master; you can't be starved or be turned out of business; but as far as the work is concerned in these days of horse power, a man needn't kill himself farming any more than at any other business. It is brains that win on a farm as well as everywhere else, and the smart man is going to ride, while the stupid one goes afoot, in the corn-field as well as in the bar or pulpit. I should like to have my hearing again, but I wouldn't leave my farm if I had

The following is an extract from a description of Vineland, published in the Ngw York Tribules, by the well known Agriculturist, Soint highlinesh:

All the farmers were of the well to do" sort, and come of them, who have turned their attention to trits and tarket gradening, have grown rich. The soil is form, varying from analy to degree, and surface cently unaniating intersected with small streams and occasions, wet needless, in which denoists of pretter nuck are stored, sufficient to fortilize the whole upland surface efter t has become exhausted of its natural tectility.

It is certainly one of the most extensive fertils treats, in one almost level position, and mitable condition for pleasant farming, that we know of this side of the Western prairies. We found some of the oldest farms apparently just as profitably productive as when first cleared of forest fifty or a hundred years ago.

The geo'ogist would som discover the cause of this continued fertility. The whole country is a marine deposit, and all through the soil we found evidences of calcurcous subtances, generally in the form of indurated calcurcous wart, showing many define to us of ancient shells, of the terriary formation; and this mark substance is scattered a 1 chrough income, in a very computanted form, and in the exact condition and most assimilated by such plants us the farmer desires to cultivate.
