" I thank you for this visit, deacon," said Mrs. Simpkins. "I think it is good for the saints to speak one to another Come again soon, deacon, and borrow my 'Guide to Holiness.' "

"Thank you, thank you," said the kind-hearted deacon, hastening his movement, seemingly alarmed at this second mention of the magazine. "Thank you. I am glad we meet so often it to have a meet so

"Thank you. I am grad we meet so often in the house of God, sister." "I am never willingly absent from the means of grace," answered Mrs. Simpkins, with somewhat like a glow of satisfaction on her sweet face. "I am glad you love God's worship, sister. Good bye.,' And the deacon took his leave, in no way benefitted by his visit, and feeling that he had conferred no benefit. Mrs. Simpkins was on spiritual heights far above him. He could not touch the hem of her garment.

She flew up stairs to her nursery and Now go to your washing as quick as you can, and try and have it done in some kind of season for once. And have your dinner decently cooked for once, if you can."

Not a word of thanks to the poor servant for having held the poor baby so long, while her work was lying undone below stairs. What had so suddenly changed Mrs. Simpkins' looks and changed Mrs. Simpkins' looks and manners? What had driven away her swectness and placidity, her heaveniy smile? How changed her voice was, So keer and cutting ! How angry she looked as she called to her little son : "Jimmy, come here !" The boy obeyed.

The boy obeyed. "Now don't you ever again come to the parlor when I'm there with com-pany," she exclaimed to the young in-truder, as she cuffed him first on one ear and then on the other, making both ring. She did not call him "darling," then. "You're the worst boy I ever saw," she went on. "I have no idea what you'll grow up to be. How mass what you'll grow up to be. How many times have I told you not to come to the parlor when I'm there with company? And yet you always come. Just as sure as I am there in comes your frowsy head."

This was true, for the child was bright enough to know his opportunity. The only sweet, liberal time his mother ever had was when she was under the observation of company. Then, for ap-pearance sake, she would give him what he asked for. He always had to pay for it afterward in tingling cars and smarting flesh, but he was well accustomed, toughened, and did not mind them much.

This unsaintly and unwholesome treatment had only just been administered to Jimmy when an odor of burning food was perceptible "Bridget ! ' screamed Mrs. Simpkins,

" your soup is burning, Bridget !." No answer ; and leaving the baby with Jimmy, Mrs. Simpkins flew to the kitchen and snatched the kettle from the stove

"What made you let the sonp burn?" she exclaimed, as Bridget entered. "I was on the shed, ma'am."

" But you ought not to be out of your kitchen when you have anything on the

what you do. Why didn't you set the soup back while you were on the shed?" " I nid not think of it, sure." " And why didn't you think of it ? I've tried so hard to make a good girl of you, and I declare I'm almost tired

It is not unusual for people to keep their best household things-the best bed and china-for their guests ; some keep for them their best looks, and THE LUNGS! manners, and words; some go still fur-ther and keep all their piety for them. Not a bit of it do they use for themselves or families ; it is never seen on ordi-nary occasions and so is perhaps all the This distressing and dangerous coupled and the premotiony symptoms, newlected couple high tawaits, biar encos, wasting flat, lever-permanently curred by "Dr. Sweppe"s Compound Symptom Wild the ry " "RONCHITIS-A memotitor of I offmone y Communities of the nuccous memory of the ar-nermanic symptom is claracterized by estarth or re-formingtion of the nuccous memory of the ar-merent, Sourcebes pains in the check. The visitor is treated to it with a liberality like that of the Western house-wife, who, on being told by her minister that she might put less molasses in his ten, insisted that if she made it all molasses it wouldn't be any too good for him. It was Mrs. Simpkins' parlor-a nice, religious looking parlor, very. A mon-strous great libble, bound in morocco and gold, with a purple rinbon book-mark a yard long dangling with crucifixes, lay alone in seeming sacredness on the centre table. Three certificates of life membership in religious societies hung in heavy gilt frames upon the wall. No idle ornaments or vain curiosities on the what-not, but divine sacred hymns-Baxter's songa and "Saint's Rest," Taylor's "Holy Liv-ing and Dving," Howe's "Blessedness of the Righteons"-books of exaited piety, that bear their readers like angel wings to the very gates of the beautiful city. Beside them were choice piles of magazines labeled "Guide to Holi-DONB."

The air of the place was still and solerms, almost holy. Deacon Wilson felt that it was while he waited there for Mrs. Simpkins. He took up a number of the "Guide to Holiness" and opened it. "Perfect Love," "Heaven Below," " Living Below our Privilege," he read in the table of contents.

" What a goodly woman Sister Simpkirs is t" he said to himself, and laid the magazines in its place, feeling himself to be so far from holiness that the very title of the articles were discourag-

" Yes, Sister Simpkins is a very devoted woman '

Mrs. Simpkins entered with aweet and placid countenance, and grave, subdeed manner like one just leaving chapel service or closet modification, and in low, chastened tones welcomed the deacon and assured him of her high estimate of the privilege of Christian communion, of the strength she derived from Christian association, the com fort from Christian sympathy. The Beacon had barely time to make a suitable response when she inquired :

" And what is the state of Zion, deacon ? What say the watchmen on the walls ?"

The question was general, and the dencon was safe in the answer, 'Few

"Do you ever read the 'Guide to Holiness?" asked Mrs. Simpkins, when she had fully delivered her opinlons on the condition and duty of the church

The deacon confessed thathe had not. "It's an excellent work, deacon," said Mrs. Simpkins, with slightly in-creased warmth of manner. "I can recommend it with entire confidence. I have taken it for years and find it very spiritual. Perhaps you would like to read it. Take the last number if you would.

"Thank you, sister, not to-day. Some other time, perhaps." "The work strenuously urges the doctrine of entire sanctification; that it is the privilege of all Christians. What do you trink of it, deacon ?" question-ed Mrs. Supplins.

" Oh ! I don't know," sighed the good man. " The command is, 'Be ye holy as I am holy ;" but, oh. dear ! sometimes 1'm afraid I haven't even been justified ; that after all I shall be a castaway."

" We need faith, faith to lay hold on the promises" urged the unwavering

Mrs. Simpkins. "But my life is so poor, sister," groaned the deacon. "I come so far short in everything. The thing I would not I do, and what I would I do not."

"I believe it is our privilege to live above sin," began Mrs. Simpkins, when the door opened and a smutty, uncared for little fellow of half a dozen years put in his head.

put in his heal. "Yes, darling? you may take one off the bureau. Now don't disturb mother any more." "I believe it is our blessed privilege, resumed Mrs. Simpkins, " to live above sin, to have Christ dwelling in us con-stantly, filling us with perfect love, rais-ing us above all doubts and fears and strengthening us with the hope of glory." A blessed privilege IW echoed the deacon, and rose to go.

"Well, I've thought of giving you a rest from me. There's no use in so much said, and being so tired, all for a sup of broth."

" No words, Bridget ; I never allow my girls to answer back. It's bad enough to have my things burned up without any imprudence from you.

" You can look for another girl to do your work. I can't suit you, and you've leave to find one that can." "How foolish in you to get mad, Bridget, just for nothing. It was my place to get angry and not yours. It was my money that was burned in the soup." "Ah, and there was no money burnt at all, and no loss of soup, either, for the children and me'll have it to ate, burat or not burnt - as you yourself knows well. And it's not at all about the soup, either ; there's enough more; fretting and fussing from morning to night, whenever yourself's in the house, and 1'm running here and there for the children, and yourself, and me work to be done all the same, and ye never pleased; but always this is wrong and the other ain's right, and me working till I can't hold me two feet twunst to the floor, and thin I've never done the work half well enough." "If you are disantished you had tet.

ter go, Bridget, but first consider what it is to have a good, steady place, with good religious people. You Irish giris never know when you're well off." "And it is not well off any one is that works in this house," answered Bridget.

"I shan't listen to any more of your impudence, Bridget, I wish you to keep on with your work till I get an-other girl," said Mrs. Simpkins.

There was something indescribably galling and oppressing in her tone and manner that roused the worst of feel-ings the generous, good natured Bridget was capable of, and she dashed the dip-
