Tar and Sarsaparilla Pills.
☞ HEADACHE. Languor and Melancholy generally spring from a disordered stomach, costiveness or a torpid liver. Each may be speedily removed by Dr. Swayne's Tar Pills, which stimulate the liver and stomach to a healthy action in removing all biliousness, and producing regular evacuations of the bowels.
LIVER COMPLAINT, that dreaded disease from which so many persons suffer, is frequently the cause of Headache, Indigestion and Dyspepsia, is speedily relieved, and are often permanently cured by their use. Fevers are often prevented by the use of these Sarsaparilla Pills, as they carry off, through the blood, the impurities from which they arise. For COSTIVENESS there is nothing so effectual as Swayne's Tar and Sarsaparilla Pills.
They are purely vegetable, and act specially on the Liver as Blue Mass or Calomel, without any bad results from taking.
Describe symptoms in all communications, and address letters to DR. SWAYNE & SON, Philadelphia. No charge for advice. Sent by mail on receipt of price. Price 25 cents a box; five boxes for $1.

THE LUNGS!
CONSUMPTION!

This distressing and dangerous complaint and its premonitory symptoms, neglected cough night sweats, hoarseness, wasting flesh, fever—permanently cured by "Dr. Swayne's Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry."
BRONCHITIS—A premonitor of Pulmonary Consumption is characterized by catarrh or inflammation of the mucous membrane of the air passages, with cough and expectoration, short breath, hoarseness pains in the chest. For all bronchial affections, sore throat, loss of voice, coughs,
DR. SWAYNE'S COMPOUND
Syrup of Wild Cherry
IS A SOVEREIGN REMEDY.
Hemorrhage, or spitting blood, may proceed from the larynx, trachea bronchia or lungs, and arise from various causes as undue physical exertion, pleurisy, or fullness of the vessels, weak lungs, overstraining of the voice suppressed evacuation, obstruction of the spleen or liver, etc.

Dr. Swayne's Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry strikes at the root of disease by purifying the blood restoring the liver and kidneys to healthy action, invigorating the nervous system.
The only standard remedy for hemorrhage, bronchial and all pulmonary complaints. Consumptives or those predisposed to weak lungs, should not fail to use this great vegetable remedy.
Its marvelous power, not only over consumption but over every chronic disease, where a gradual alterative action is needed. Under its use the cough is loosened, the night sweats diminish the pain subsides, the pulse returns to its natural standard, the stomach is improved in its power to digest and assimilate the food, and every organ has a purer and better quality blood supplied to it out of which new recruits and plastic material is made.

SAVED HIS LIFE.
A REMARKABLE CURE!
Was that of Edward H. Hamson, Engineer at George Sweeny's Pottery, 1324 Ridge Avenue, Philadelphia. He had a violent cough, night sweats, sore throat, great weakness, spit at different times a mint of blood, gave up all hope of recovery. Through the use of "Dr. Swayne's Wild Cherry Syrup" became a sound and healthy man, and remains so to this day, although over twenty years have elapsed since he was cured.
PRICE ONE DOLLAR. Six bottles $5. If your druggist or storekeeper does not sell it, we will forward one dozen, freight paid, to any address, on receipt of price.

SWAYNE'S OINTMENT.
HOME TESTIMONY:
I was sorely afflicted with one of the most distressing of all diseases Pruritus or Prurigo, or more commonly known as Itching Piles. The itching at times was almost indescribable, increased by scratching, and not unfrequently became quite sore.
I bought a box of "Swayne's Ointment" its use gave quick relief, and in a short time made a perfect cure. I can now sleep undisturbed, and I would advise all who are suffering with this distressing complaint to procure "Swayne's Ointment" at once. I had tried prescriptions almost innumerable, without finding any permanent relief. JOS. W. CHRIST,

To its Natural Vitality and Color.

Of its Superior Excellence.
Read this Home Certificate testified to by Edward B. Garrigues, one of the most competent Druggists and Chemists in Philadelphia, a man whose veracity none can doubt:
I am happy to add my testimony to the great value of the "London Hair Color Restorer," which restored my hair to its original dark color, and the hue appears to be permanent. I am satisfied that this preparation is nothing like a dye, but operates upon the secretions. It is also a beautiful hair dressing, and promotes the growth. I purchased the first bottle from Ed. B. Garrigues, drug st. Tenth and Coates-sts who can also testify my hair was very gray when I commenced its use.
MRS. MILLER,
No. 730 N. Ninth-st., Philadelphia.
DR. SWAYNE & SON—Respected Friends: I have the pleasure to inform you that a lady of my acquaintance, Mrs Miller, is delighted with the success of your "London Color Hair Restorer." Her hair was falling rapidly and quite gray. The color has been restored, and the falling out entirely stopped by its use.
E. B. GARRIGUES
Druggist Cor. Tenth and Coates-sts., Phila.
All that art can accomplish in beautifying, strengthening, thickening and adorning the hair is effected by using "London Hair Color Restorer." It stimulates and forces a new growth; if gray restores its natural color, and renders it silky and beautiful; cures dandruff; keeps the scalp clean, cool and healthy. All druggists sell it. Price 75 cents; six bottles, $4. Sent by express to any address.

Ruth's Mistake.

BY ADNA H. LICHTNER.

"So you are going to town again, are you, Rob?"
Ruth's blue eyes were filled with tears, and her childish face wore a grieved look, but her voice had a commanding ring in it that spoilt the effect of the eyes and face.
Rob West stood in front of a merry, crackling hickory fire, that sent out a warmth which penetrated every corner of the tidy little sitting-room. He was brushing his clothes briskly, and, being thus occupied, did not look up at his little wife's inquiry, but wondered "What was the matter now."
If Rob had only looked up and seen that beseeching, yearning look, that pretty interlacing of the fingers, how different would have been the ending of the story.
"Yes, Ruth," he said, in a bright, cherry voice, that rang through the room like the song of a bird "I must go, but I will be at home on the seven o'clock train."
"Must go! What for, I would like to know?"
"Never mind, Ruthie, you would not understand if I should take the time to explain it. What does that little head know about business?"
Rob's playful words, that he had imagined would soothe her, had the very opposite effect.
"Oh, of course I don't know anything. What a pity you did not marry Mary Edwards. No doubt she would have been capable of understanding you and you business both."
Ruth spoke with a sarcastic, taunting ring to her voice, as she began energetically to brush the dust off of the mantel with her apron that Rob had raised but a moment before.
Rob composed his lips tightly to keep back the angry words. He was not perfect far from it, although his heart was, large and warm. He had many faults and infirmities—none knew them better, none regretted them so deeply as he. Rob had formed a resolution long before that he would never allow himself to get angry when Ruth did, and he would keep that vow be it ever so hard, and it was hard, for Ruth was quick as a flash to anger, and as quick over, bursting out with hot, impatient words, and ready to make up in the next breath.
"No, Ruthie, I did not want Mary Edwards, I am satisfied with my choice, and wish that you could say the same."
"Well, for my part, I think you ought to be satisfied, when you know that I might have married Will Ellis and lived in a fine house, with servants to come and go at my command, instead of this little ten-by-twelve frame, and myself the household drudge."
Ruth's temper was up to white heat now, and she did not care what she said.
"Well, Ruthie," Rob said, with a deep sigh, "it will be all right some day. I will grow rich or die, and you can marry rich."
"Great danger of your growing rich and about as much of your dying; better get your life insured if you are going to die."
"All right, I will. Now I must go. I will be obliged to drive Bird single today. Speed is lame. I don't like to drive her alone, she feels too bad this cold weather. But brush my hat, Ruthie, and get me a handkerchief, while I harness up, and I will try her."
Rob heaved a deep sigh as he walked out to the barn. Ruth's angry words bled his tender heart; for, with all her faults, he loved little brown haired Ruthie better than the whole world, although she tried him sorely sometimes. He harnessed Bird to the light buggy and drove around to the hitching post, tied her, and entered the house to find his wife standing just where he had left her, with the same frown on her brow, and the same pout to her pretty lips.
What in the wide world possessed Ruth, and caused her to be so unkind to Rob, would have been hard to tell. She knew that she was cross and pettish, but could assign no reason for it, only she wanted something, and she did not know what. Oh, how her heart ached to lay her head on that great, brave, handsome fellow's shoulder—the husband's who would have died for her—and, with her face very close to, sob out her repentence and crave his forgiveness for her bitter words! But pride, stubborn pride, held her back. Rob came and stood by his wee little wife, and looked sorrowfully down upon her.
"Ruthie, I love you so! Don't make me feel my insufficiency to fill your heart. Kiss me, pet, and say good-by." Rob drew her to him, and waited for her to raise her lips for the caress, but he waited in vain; and, bending down, he pressed a found but sad kiss on her brow, while he said, "Well, Ruthie, if you will not kiss me good-by, I shall have to go without it, for I will be compelled to drive fast to catch the train now. Never mind, we will make it all up when I come home."
Rob turned, and, with lingering look went out. The last sound Ruth heard was the quick patter of Bird's feet on the frozen ground, then he was gone.
"I do wonder what Rob will think of me! He knows that I did not mean one word that I said. Oh, dear! I wish I had kissed him before he went away." So thought Ruth, as she stood at the window watching his form out of sight.
What a long, long, weary day it was! The afternoon set in, cold and gloomy; but inside, thanks to Rob's strong arm, all was warm and bright. Old Rover lay stretched out at full length before the cosy fire, while Dot sang merrily in his cage. "How dare he sing!" Ruth thought, when she felt so down hearted and sad. She went to the window and looked out on the gloomy surroundings, but found no relief or comfort there. She turned away with a sigh, and out of a little box in the closet she brought forth some mysterious patterns and dainty fine linen, and was soon busy with the great problem of fitting together these tiny little garments.
In the mean time Rob West drove as rapidly as rough roads would permit to the station, his mind filled with thoughts of Ruth and all she had said. Maybe she was right in censuring him for condemning her to the dull and laborious life of a farmer's wife, when she might have been the bride of wealth. Then the words, "Better get your life insured, if you are going to die," but perhaps it would be a wise plan; and then, if he should die, Ruthie would have something to live on.
Rob arrived at the station just in time for the train, and soon he was in the busy city. After he had finished his business, he entered a well-known life insurance office, and presented his noble form at the desk for a policy, payable at his death to Ruth. He found no difficulty in securing what he sought, and, with a deep sight of relief—for, he knew not what—he placed it in his breast pocket and started for home.
"Poor little Ruthie!" Rob thought, as he wended his way to the depot. "I must be kind and forgiving with her just now. I expect she can't help being nervous and irritable."
And at the same time, away off in the little cottage, Ruth was thinking, "I am sorry I treated Rob so badly! I will have a nice warm supper for him, and afterwards we will talk it all over."
Half past seven, eight o'clock. Oh, how the minute hand drags along! The little table was spread with a dainty little supper, the very things that Rob liked best. The bright fire sparkled a welcome from the great wide chimney. Rob's comfortable arm-chair stood in the warmest corner, waiting to hold something in its great strong arms; but still he tarried.
"I know he has had time to get here," Ruth thought, as she opened the door once more and peeped out into the darkness.
Some one is coming, but it isn't Rob. One, two, three lanterns. What can it mean? Nearer and still nearer they come. Something vague and unformed strikes a chill to her throbbing heart. They have opened the gate, and are driving in. Who can it be? She never moves, but watches them with a stony stare as they lift out a heavy burden and pause at the door. She steps aside, and they enter and lay Rob's mangled form on the snowy bed. Then, like a flash, Ruth realizes what has happened, and with a cry of agony that those rough but kind-hearted men will never forget, she sprang to his side.
"Rob, wake up! It's little Ruthie! Don't you know me? O Rob, have you left me alone?"
Without a struggle, Ruth sank down, senseless and cold. All night she lay in a deep stupor, and when morning came a wee little life-blossom was laid, pale and cold, by its father's side. Many true hearted mourning friends followed Rob's form to its last resting place, talking one with another how Rob's horse had shied and thrown him over a high bank, causing instant death.
Ruth came slowly back to life and bitter remorse. The little history of the past came sweeping back to memory, with Rob's kind actions, and her waywardness blending together to form a most unwelcome picture. Oh, it was a trying hour when the life insurance came to light, adding worm-wood to her deep sorrow, stretching far out in the wide, grand future, the sky bright with expectations, the kind hand and tender heart of Rob at her command. With such associations, it was pleasant to be young. But to have fallen from the brightness and bloom of expectations into a desolate waste of darkness and remorse the sky overcast with dark clouds, which loomed up between her and the bright future, mountains high, to wait, weary and trembling, for admission at death's door, with the words, "The old must die, the young may die," fresh in her mind, and still be young, was, indeed, a bitter, bitter fate.
Ruth accepted Rob's gift that he gave with his life, and with a meek heart used it as an aid to her deeds of charity, with which she spent the time of waiting for God to call her away, "to make it up with Rob."
