THE LOST BANK NOTE.

" James," said Mrs. Garret, while sitting at brackfast one morning, "I don't like the new girl. I have my suspicions about her."

"About Ann!" returned Mr. Garret, in surprise. "Why, it's only a few days ago that I heard you boasting to Mrs. Brenmer you had the best cook in New York."

" So she is a good cook. I don't expect to get such another for twice the wages. It is not about her work -she does all that well-but I've no trust in her."
" What has she done ?"

"What has she done?" echoed the lady somewhat sharply. "Nothing, of course, or I'd soon send her packing I But she's shy, and secret, and won't tell me anything about herself; and has ridiculous airs about sleeping alone, and won't aver allow. Amenda justile her won't even allow Amanda inside her bedroom door. There's something wrong depend upon it. If there wasn't a screw loose somewhere she wouldn't be here for such low wages." "If that's a fault against her you can raise them," suggested Mr. Garret.

"There, James, you may as well go to your office, if that's all you have to say," cried the lady of the house. "But mark my words, before you go, I'll find Ann Walker out before long." Mr. Garret sighed as he rose to de-He well knew that remonstrance would avail nothing, for Mrs. Garret's prejudices were as the laws of the Medes and Persians, that changeth not, so he took himself off without another word.

"Amanda i" cried the lady, when left alone, " bring Horace up." In response to this summons a large, slatternly girl of eleven or twelve made her appearance from the basement, with a little boy in her arms, who made a snatch at an egg stand and knocked it on the floor in passing the table.

"You awkward, careless gypsy!"
cried Mrs. Garret, with great spirit,
"that's the second thing you have broken this morning. Who do you think is going to pay for all you destroy? Come here, Horace, love, and have a nice piece of toast. What's Ann doing, Amanda?" "She's drassing the turkey, mum."

"Did she spour the front steps this morning?"

"Yes, mum; she got up at five "Go and tell her I expect her to wash the drawing room windows before din-

"Upon my word," muttered Mrs.
Garret, resentfully, as Amanda retired to carry her message. "I'll pull her pride down for her a bit. Must wash the stees at five in the morning forsooth lest folks see her at all. I'll take that out of her."

In a few minutes Ann came up to clear the dishes off. She was tall and well proportioned, about twenty years of age, her face pale, refined in fea-tures, not handsome, but singularly intelligent and earnest in its expression She looked a little anxious and troubled as she noiselessly arranged the room, and when she was ready to go, she said, in a very soft voice :

" May I ask a favor, ma'am, that the cleaning of the front windows be put off till early in the morning ?"

" No," answered ber mistress, curtly.

"I want them done now."
"I don't wish to be seen by passers she urged, almost pleadingly. "It by, she might, amost pleatingly.

is of importance for me not to be seen by—by some one who might know me."

'You will obey my orders, girl, or leave this house!" returned Mrs. Garret, beginning to quiver with temper.

The servant courtesied and withdrew In a few minutes she was at the windows, but in a close sunbonnet, to Mrs. Garret's unspeakable disgust.

"I think I can see through my lady," was her inward comment. "She's some jailbird the detectives are after. I'll lay a trap for her, and if she's not caught in it, my penetration isn't much."

Rising from her sewing machine, which she had been busily plying in Master Horace's behalf, while her brain was busily revolved, she unlocked he desk, took from it a twenty dollar note carefully marked the number, and dropped it as by accident, under the edge of the table. Then she cut and basted some more work, making enough rub-bish about the floor to insure the servant's having to use her dustpan before dinner. By the time this was accom-plished she discovered little Horaca and the machine in such danger of coming to grief together that, first driving that innocent to the other side of the room, and then picking up her scattered shuttle and reels she called Ann up stairs to put the parior to rights, and left the room, taking Horace with

When Mr. Garret came home to dinner he saw by his wife's portentous face that something dreadful had occur-

"James," said she, solemnl , "I have found the girl out in a theft." "Who? Amanda?"

"Pshaw! no. Your 'superior girl.'
Ann. She has just helped herself to twenty dollars of mine."

"Good gracious!" cried alr. Garret, pausing in the act of carving the tur-Yes ; it was a twenty dollar note which—ahem—happened to fall out of my desk on the floor this forenoon. I was busy with Horace and so-alient-forgot to pick it up before I left the room. When I came down to dinner I instantly missed it, and the abandoned creature actually said she might have swept it into the dustpan and burned it.

Fortunately I have the number of it, and after dinner you must go immediately and fetch a policeman."

Bewildered, though far from convinced by the proofs of Ann's guilt which this spouse cited, Mr. Garret suffered himself to be sent off on his errand of justice, and soon returned, in company with a detective, armed with a warrant and Ann was imperatively rung up, while Amanda was ordered to remain, that she might take a warning from the event to take place.

"Ann," said her master, feeling very real! "Mrs. Garret misses some mores."

small,"Mrs. Garret misses some money and this man has come to"—

"Find it, my dear," subjoined the officer, who had been regarding her with undisguised interest. "So if you'll hand over the keys of your kit we'll proceed to business instanter."

"And," said Mrs. Garret, sternly,

"And," said Mrs. Garret, sternty,
"If the stolen property is found in your possession, you will go to prison, miss —that you shall."

Ann's white face slowly kindled with a scorching red; her large, dark eyes dilated with a deep herror; her lips turned pale; her breath seemed to leave her in a gasp.

"You accuse me-of theft?" she faltered.

Mr. Garret silently put her into a chair. She looked as if the shock would strike her dead.

"Do you deny," demanded Mrs. Garret, none the less spitefully for this attention, "that you picked up that twenty dollar bill that was dropped on the carpet, just on this forenoon? Have'nt you got it in your pocket, or crunk, or hidden about your bedroom at this moment? Go on with the search, Mr. Officer: about determined not be strike her dead Mr. Officer; she's determined not to confess. It was a national bank bill of confess. twenty dollars, numbered 108,948. "Seems to me I've seen your face before this, my gal," muttered the officer, confidentially. "You'll please fork over the key of your kit, young wom-

With trembling hands Ann waved him off, and untied a ribbon from about her neck, on which a small key was suspended.

As she gave it to him a sort of 500 shook her, and large tears rushed in a

"I'll show the way," said the mistress of the house, sure by these signs of sorrow that the note was about to be discovered. "James, keep your eye on the unprincipled wretch, for there's no knowing what she may do."

Arrived at Ann's miserable bedroom, the officer first cooly rifled the pockets of all the dresses to be found hanging up, and not finding what he sought, dragged the single trunk out under the skylight and unlocked it.

Very neatly arranged were poor Ann Walker's simple belongings. Some daintily frilled underclothing, smelling of lavauder; her modest Sunday apparel folded by itself in silver paper; a box of piqin linen collars and cuffs, one or two books of such unexpected titles as 'Longfellow's Hyperion," "The Holy Grail," by Tennyson, and some of Madame Michelet's in the original French; and a beautiful mother of-pearl desk in the very bottom with the initials "A. W. A." in a silver monogram on the low.

"Now I'm blessed if this ain't a pretty kit for a servant girl," remarked the detective, taking out the desk and proceeding to pry it open with his pen-

"A wholesale robber," groaned Mrs. Garret, clasping her hands; "and to think that I have harbored"— "Hallo," cried the detective, open-ing the lid, and taking out a silver photograph case, richly chased, and gar-nishen with an elaborate monogram, "Who's this?" Then the pair had a fine surprise. Opening the case, they saw two cartes—one of a majestic looking milltary man, apparently about sixty, the other of a young girl, clad in silk and richest lace, whose face bore the exact similitude of Ann. Walker's. "By the hooky !" ejaculated the offi-cer, a light breaking all over his face, and astonishment, prevented further articulation. Taking a greasy pocketbook out of his breast pocket he opened it, and drew forth a photograph, which was Ann Walker's viguette

"Them two's the same gal ?" asked he eagerly.

"Yes," answered the lady, with a glance. "I thought I had spotted that gal the minute I set eyes on her, "cried the man exultingly; "and to think of me finding her after all, and three of us a-heatin" for, her these six months. I'm cown the thousand pounds reward?

"What do you mean?" asked Mrs.

She began to believe she had been she tergan to believe she may been, sheltering a very great criminal indead.

"What do I mean?" grinned thade, tective. "Why, that you've made, the orkardest mistake, misses, you, ever made in your life. You've heard of Gineral Arniu as lives in, the marble palace up the Hudson ?".

"Of course I have -indeed, have some equaintance with him." "O would give the universe to scrape one, she might with truth have added.

"That's usfucky—for you," observ-ed the officer, with an obvious absence of sympathy; "for yer see this here sook as you've accused of stealing is his only daughter and helress' — What ?"
