FANATICS IN VERMONT.

In 1797-8 a set of people sprong up in Leyden, Mass., and spread into Vermont, whose founder was a British retugee from Burgoyne's army, by the name of Dorritt. He claimed to be superhuman, and to have power to give immortality to all who believed in him. They lived on vegetables, rejected all taws of God or man, and followed the dictates of their own passions. They met once a week to eat, drink, hear Dorrill's exhortations, fiddle and dance, At one of these meetings a speciator. Captain Foster, a man of giant frame, heard Dorrill asserting that "no arm of desh can hart me." The Capt. squarof off, and knocked the imposter heels over head; and as the fellow picked himself up, Foster knocked him down egain, and beat him till he renounced his nonsense, and his followers, disgus-ted, fled from him, and that was the last of Dorrillism in Vermont.

In 1817, Isaac Bullerd came from Ascot, Canada, and set up to be a pro-phet. With a leathern girdle about his toins, he traversed the country, and a flock of fools followed him and became his disciples. A Christian minister, named Joseph Bell, believed in Buliard. and a Methodist minister-Holmes also joined the sect. They all put their property into common stock, and Bullard gave to each what he pleased. They were married and unmarried, were rewarded and punished, just as he directed. Filthiness was their cardinal virtue, and old and young, male and fe-male, rolled in the dirt of the street.— Pilgrims they called themselves, and they finally migrated to the West in a body. At Cheinnati they were rein-forced by new members. When they reached New Madrid they made a halt, and there broke up, dispersed and most of them perished. In 1837 one Bridgman, who had been a Universalist, becoming partially de-ranged, claimed to be divinely inspired. He gathered up a lot of half-cracked people like himself, and they began a mission of disturbing religious meetings by screams and yells, pretending they were acting under the power of the spirit. They got possession of a meet-ing house in Hardwick and held service there, barking like dogs and imitating, the noises of beast. But their chief worship was rolling on the floor, and they got the name of "Holy Rollers." A very sensible clergyman, the Rev. Chester Wright, exposed them in a plain sermon; some of them were put in jail for disturbing public worship and they subsided—Rev. Dr. S. I. Prime, in the Observer,
