

The Carbon Advocate.

H. V. MORTIMER, EDITOR.

LEHIGHTON, PA. SATURDAY MORNING, MARCH 10, 1877.

The Camerons having assisted in bulldozing Tilden, are in turn bulldozed by the man they helped to make President. Their works do follow them.

The State Legislature on Tuesday decided to adjourn finally on March 23, and reassemble on the first Tuesday in January, 1878. There are about 200 bills on file in the Senate and 500 in the House, many of which are intended to modify or repeal existing general laws, for the purpose of meeting special cases. Most of these bills, fortunately, are likely to fail. An effort to have bills not disposed of this session carried over to next year has been defeated.

President Hayes sent the following Cabinet appointments to the Senate for confirmation on Wednesday: Secretary of State—William M. Evarts, of New York. Secretary of the Treasury—John Sherman, of Ohio. Secretary of War—General Charles Devins, of Massachusetts. Secretary of the Navy—General R. W. Thompson, of Indiana. Post Master General—Judge D. M. Key, of Tennessee. Attorney General—Hon. G. W. McCree, of Iowa. Secretary of the Interior—Carl Schurz, of Missouri.

When the Senate went into executive session, Mr. Blaine moved that the nomination of Mr. Evarts be referred; Mr. Conkling demanded the reference of Mr. Schurz's nomination, and a number of the Senators demanded the reference of that of Mr. Key. Finally all the nominations were referred. As the Committees are not yet chosen it is not likely that the nominations will be acted upon before Saturday, except, possibly, that of Mr. Sherman. Some of the Republican Senators have expressed great dissatisfaction with the appointments; still it is believed they will eventually be confirmed.

Inauguration. The inauguration of President Hayes took place Monday at the Capitol, in Washington. The oath was administered by Chief Justice Waite. The new President, when he stepped forward to read his inaugural address, and also when he had finished the reading, was enthusiastically applauded by the people. There was present at the ceremony a most brilliant and distinguished assemblage, including Gen. Grant, the heads of the departments, Justices of the Supreme Court of the United States, the General of the Army, members of the Diplomatic body, Senators and Congressmen, Governors and ex-Governors of several States, and other officials. The parade, which was very successful, was witnessed by thousands of people, and the torchlight procession at night was very large.

The inaugural address. Fellow citizens—We have assembled to respect the public ceremonial born by Washington, observed by all my predecessors, and now a time honored custom, which marks the commencement of the Presidential office. Charged to the duties of this great trust, I proceed, in compliance with usage, to announce some of the leading principles on which I now chiefly engage the public attention by which it is my duty to be guided. In the discharge of these duties, I shall not undertake to lay down irrevocable principles or measures of administration, but to state the motives which should animate us and suggest important ends to be attained in accordance with our institutions and essential to the welfare of our country.

At the outset of the discussion which preceded the recent Presidential election, it is clear that I should fully acknowledge my sentiments in regard to several of the important questions which then appeared to demand the consideration of the country. Following the example and in part also the language of one of my predecessors, I have endeavored to repeat what was said before the election, trusting that my countrymen will candidly weigh and understand it, and that they will feel assured that the sentiments declared in accepting the nomination for the Presidency will be the standard of the Government, so far as depends upon the Constitution and laws, on the Chief Executive of the nation. The present publication of the country upon such principles and by such measures as will secure the protection of all the citizens in the free enjoyment of their constitutional rights, is now the object of our public affairs, which are a source of patriotic pride and joy to all the people. Many of the calamitous effects of the tremendous revolution which has passed over the southern States still remain. The important also benefits which will surely follow sooner or later the hearty and united cooperation of the North and South in the reconstruction of the South have not been realized. Inherent and embarrassing questions of a political nature, which are the result of the war, and the inevitable bearing of war, peace and peaceful reconstruction, are not yet settled.

Whatever differences of opinion may exist as to the cause of the reconstruction, the fact is clear that the reconstruction of the South is now the object of our public affairs, which are a source of patriotic pride and joy to all the people. Many of the calamitous effects of the tremendous revolution which has passed over the southern States still remain. The important also benefits which will surely follow sooner or later the hearty and united cooperation of the North and South in the reconstruction of the South have not been realized. of service into that of citizenship on an equal basis with the rest of the nation. It is our duty to protect the rights of all citizens, and to ensure that the Government is administered in accordance with the principles of justice and equity.

Our Philadelphia Letter. PHILADELPHIA, Pa., March 6, 1877. DEAR ADVOCATE—As the day has passed when he said the "Deed is done," let us say the same and set it right down to business. If any of us have been up till five o'clock on a day of discovery and have discovered nothing, let us drop that information to ourselves for as best it amounts to nothing.

"The rag-tag and bobtail" of the carpet bag brigade do not like at all what President Hayes stands for. The inauguration was a great bore to many disgusted and disappointed politicians. Some Republicans say, "Let Civil Service Reform will be very hard to perform."

A box is said to be the "worst of jobs." This is what some of us would be big game thought the other day when they found they had just received a box of cigars on a holiday. They were in consultation with President Hayes in Co. Adams, of course they said "Christened" and "baptized."

Horses and cows are suffering for food and many vehicles are unable to run. This is caused by the great quantities of grain and large number of wheels which are hoisted on the streets throughout the land. It is feared President Hayes may soon be without sufficient clothing to protect him from these chilly March winds for every body seems anxious to get in his Cabinet.

They are so going to the front in hundreds. Many men who were better than they were before, but I think it would be better if they would never be any more. Many men who were better than they were before, but I think it would be better if they would never be any more.

Washington Letter. From our Special Correspondent. Washington, D. C., March 6, 1877. Intense excitement prevailed at the Capitol the last few days of the session, but at last the storm is over and we may very soon look for peace and quiet throughout the country. Congress remained in session throughout the whole of Thursday night and it was not till between four and five o'clock Friday morning that the last roll call was taken.

It is to be regretted extremely that some of the measures that have lately been enacted at the instance of the President, and which are the result of the Presidential election, are not such as to meet the approval of the people.
