I heard him say-"Who will marry May Bradstone now?" and then his feet went rapidly

I called aloud for help; the uproar of the storm drowned my voice. I paus-ed. Just then the wind lulled, and I heard an order to push off ; the speaker was Jacob Kiel. I again shouted in my agony; but my voice and the wind rose together-I was not heard.

I continued to shout like a madman, though I knew that all hope was gone-that I was alone, like a trapped rat, in that I was alone, like a trapped rat, in a sinking ship. Furiously I beat the door, all the while painfully conscious that rescue was impossible and death certain, for it was night, and, as no doubt the storm would separate the boats, my absence would not be discovered until the ves. set had foundered.

Could I expect aught else, when in the occasional Jull of the hurrizane I heard the rush of the deadly waters in the hold, and felt the ship turch more heavily each moment as she plunged in the trough of the sea?

Suddenly she gave a terrible heel over, and a wave came ratting down the companion ladder like thunder, rushed under the door, and inundated the conject the sea, as it were, in a box. Was there really no way of escape? I looked mounted higher and higher, "Fool ! Idiot !" I exclaimed. "Why did you not think of it before ' You are My eyes had rested upon my revolver. In a second I had fired two of its barrels into the lock of the door, shivering it to atoms, and the next minute I was upon the deck, only just in time, for the vessel was settling fast. It would have settled before, but that the storm had abated. With a wild hope I looked for the boats. Near or far, all was alike-darkness hid the waters. But having succeeded so far, I resolved not to des-pair. One by one I discharged the re-imining barrels of my revolver, and then plunged into the sea, to swim as far as I could from the ship before it sank, hoping that I should find some pieces of wreck.

I did to before I had proceeded far-a mast, with cordage attached. This heiped me, for, after lashing myself to the mast as well as I could, the waves bore me away. Suddenly, however, a fearful rush of water seized me. I was drawn rapidly back, and then down as in a whirlpool-flung, it seemed, here, there, and everywhere, after which I remembered no more. When I came to I was in one of the boats, with May Bradstone leaning over me. It appeared that directly morning dawned the boats were called together, and the captain went over the names, when mine was found missing, upon which he resolved to row back, and see Old Mr. Bradstone knew the match would be a good one, and readily gave his consent, so that our engagement was soon made public. I was present when the news reached Jacob Kiel. I

"Oh, Edward, look! he is here, too!"

And so he was. Leaning quietly over the side, watching the land, ap-parently, was Jacob Kiel, a passenger,

Save by a casual interchange of a few Save by a casual interenange of a lew words, Kiel never troubled us; and we were making a capital journey, when, just as we were within twenty degrees of the line, we were struck by a hurricane which the captalu declared was almost a cyclone in violence.

The vessel could not weather it. The masts crashed overboard, taking sever-al of the crow with them, and before the wreck could be cut adrift, a portion of the broken spars, dashing against the ship, had cause a leak below the water-line, and the cry was— "We are sinking! Lower the boats—the pumps are uscless!"

The captain was marvelously firm and cool, and by his example made us all the same

The boats were rapidly lowered and filled, while, thank Heaven, the storm seemed to abate. The women went first, of course, and all was proceeding well when, just as the last boat was be-ing filled. I remembered that in my hurry I had left my mother's ministure in my chest.

There was plenty of time to fetch it, and in a second I was down in the cabin.

already upon the likeness, when I heard a foot upon the stairs. I turned, and by the dim light yet swinging from the roof perceived Jacob Klel. Good Heavens ! The diabolical expression of his face, the fiendish malice in his dark, snake-like eyes, revealed his intention in a moment. He had come to do us some deadly harm. Leaping up, I seized my revolver, to be on my guard, out an attack was not his purpose. Before I could prevent him he had quickly closed the cabin door, and locked it on the outside.

Like a flash of lightning all the horrors of my position instantly flashed before me. 1 was a prisoner in the sinking ship !

Uttering a loud shout of fury, I sprang forword. The cry was echoed by a laugh from Jacob Klel.

The sea was nearly calm, the sun ng, and their search was not difficult. They soon perceived a dark object. Approaching it, they found it to be myself, clinging like grim death to the wreck, but laughing and yeiling like a manise. In fact I was mad, and for some time after they had managed to get me into the boat I remained so; then I became caimer, though I was delirious for a whole day and night.

Directly sensibility returned I told my story, filing every one with horror, especially May Bratistone. "I see it all?" exclaimed the captain. "The villain! Last night our boats separated in the darkness; this morning the one boat bearing Jacob Kiel and the worst of the crew was missing. He has either steered the boat into a different track, or prid the fellows to desert us, fearful of the punishment that might have awaited him when we touched land."

Whether this was so I do not know, for we never heard of Jacob Kiel again. That day we were picked up by a ship homeward bound, and in due time were landed, when May and I were married.

My wife will not hear of crossing the ocean again, as she cannot forget, as indeed I cannot, that most terrible moment in my life.
