LEHIGHTON, PA.

SATURDAY MORNING, MAY 12, 1877.

—Speaking of the candidates for the Speakership a Washington correspondent says that Garfield is the brainiest man of the lot; Cox the readiest; Randall the likeliest; Foster the solidest, and either Blackburn or Springer the worst.

—The Centennial Board of Finance have paid into the Treasury of the United States $1,000,000 on account of the appropriation made by the Government to the Centennial Exhibition. The remaining $500,000 will be paid next week.

—The "Supreme Lodge of the Knights of Honor," held its annual session in New York Tuesday afternoon. The report of the "Supreme Dictator" estimated the total membership of the Order at 20,000, contained in 607 lodges. The Order has been established in 32 States, and has 18 grand lodges in operation.

—A despatch from Washington of the 4th inst., says: "The Cabinet, at its session to-day, voted to postpone calling the extra session of Congress till the 15th of October. For several weeks past many prominent members of Congress of both parties and leading business men from all parts of the country have been urging the Administration to avoid an extra session during the summer, if possible. Members of Congress have expressed great unwillingness to come to Washington during the heated term, and business men have been almost unanimous in the opinion that if the extra session could be avoided for the present all business enterprises would have a better opportunity to recuperate."

—The seventeen-year locusts are reported as having put in an appearance in quite a number of localities. Says a correspondent, writing from Greenbush, N. Y.: "Stories of the poisonous nature of the sting of this curious insect, which did duty in 1860, creating much alarm, have been revived, but the seventeen-year locust is harmless to man and beast. It is an inch and a half long when full grown. It comes out of the ground tail first, and has on its head white marks forming a perfect letter W. In 1860, believers in signs and superstitions declared that the appearance of this cabalistic sign denoted war. In that year the locusts did not entirely disappear until late in the fall. People still living here remember their appearance also in 1843. They were so thick then the trees were threshed with whips, and dead locusts carried away by the bushel. They do no permanent injury, but interfere greatly with the year's fruit crop."

Extra Session Postponed—Some Like It, Some Don't—The Washington Monument—Shall It Be Pulled Down—Poor Lo to Be Put to Work—Two Presidents in Philadelphia—Miss Porter's Wedding, etc., etc.

From our Special Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 9, 1877.

Last Saturday the city was thrown into a sudden spasm of surprise by the announcement that the Cabinet had decided to postpone the extra session of Congress till October 15th. This decision, like all others, will both please and displease. Congressmen and business men will be rejoiced, while the District trades-people and certain classes of politicians will be disappointed and will fume and fret accordingly. Among various reasons given for this change in the political programme, the principal one seems to be that Congressmen don't want to work during the hot weather, and that there is no real necessity for so early a session since the Army and Navy appropriations are all that demand it, and they will only have to go over one regular pay-day. The first that came out on the subject is this: "The President, no doubt, wants to have his southern policy fully tested before Congress meets; but that is no reason why vital commercial interests of the country should suffer. Nor should they suffer because the convenience and comfort of Congressmen will be subserved by having the time for meeting in October. We should like to know who these Congressmen are who, consulting their own convenience, requested that the session should be postponed until late in the autumn. The necessities of the army alone should have inspired an earlier meeting. It is no excuse to say that the army can be clothed and supplied with all its necessaries, and that until the 15th day of October only one regular pay-day has been passed. Not a day should pass after the money became due without paying these men. There is none in the service of the Government who should be paid more promptly than the soldier and the sailor, and it would be an outrage to compel them to wait simply because the President and his Cabinet don't want Congress here, or because Congressmen—who are already drawing pay at the rate of $5,000 per annum for doing nothing—don't care to come to Washington in warm weather.

The Washington Monument, about which so much has been said and written, is still a subject of discussion in the society which was formed especially to attend to its construction and arrangement. The foundations have recently been examined by United States engineers and architects, and report make that they are insecure and entirely inefficient for the weight of the finished structure, now only about a third as tall as it is designed to be; and legislation now turns to the question of what shall be done with the thing. It was begun as much as twenty-five years ago, and as it was designed to be a lasting memorial of Washington, the great and good, the specimen stones from all parts of the world have been contributed, and now it is decided that the effort and expense have all been in vain. Washingtonians are nearly sick of the whole affair, for this reason. Years ago when the funds that had been collected for the monument had been exhausted, every sort of device was resorted to for the purpose of renewing and increasing them. Among other happy thoughts was that of begging continually from the generous public, and so the men, boys, ladies and children with placards pleading for contributions and setting forth the benevolence of the object were placed in every public place in the District. One enterprising clerk in the Patent Office without passing one of these ladies—for none have been taken to pass down in the most conspicuous places—but the Post Office, or the Treasury. The Art Gallery has one, the Smithsonian Institute has one—in fact, the Washington Monument has become an eye-sore and an orifice to people in this vicinity. Various suggestions have been made as to what shall now be done with it, the most common being to remove the unfinished and unsightly structure and use the marble, of which the outer wall is built, for the walls of some useful asylum, and the ornamental stones that have been presented for an inside hall for holding national statuary. A room for that purpose has been set apart in the Capitol, but it is entirely too small for the purpose and some change will necessarily take place in reference to it before many years, even if this new plan fails to avail.

General George Crook, the great Indian fighter, is in this city now, trying to influence the Administration to set the Indians at work and compel them to keep to it. He says it is the surest and quickest way to civilize them.

The President goes to Philadelphia to-morrow morning to see the opening of the permanent exhibition. President Grant also proposes to be there.

The great society event of this week is the wedding of Miss Lizzie Porter, which is to take place to-morrow evening at the Church of the Epiphany.

Our Philadelphia Letter.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., May 8, 1877.

On Thursday, May 3d, Captain DOONER, (proprietor of Green's restaurant, Eighth and Chestnut streets), had a good joke played on him by a ten-pound lobster which he had placed in the show window of the ladies restaurant. It appears that his lobstership was alive and kicking and his claws were unpinged when he was placed in the Eighth street show window amid choice strawberries, greanic asparagus, huge suad, ravishing tenderloins, and lots and lots of nice tid-bits. But what was this to Mr. Lobster? Why nothing at all! Just at this instant the eyes of this choice salad-fiend alighted upon the drinkables. Now, in the window there was claret, champagne, whiskey, (Gibson's best), and the choicest vintage of Sherry; but none of these the lobster wanted. He wished a "brandy smash," and he had it, too; for, espying a bottle of prime French brandy in one corner of the window, this naughty, naughty denizen of the mighty deep clutched aforesaid bottle by the neck with one of his powerful claws, and, as the claw did not give way, the neck of the bottle did! Ah! such a sight! such a sight! The lobster had his smash, and a bottle of brandy in the bargain! Wasn't this a good joke on the genial Captain Dooner?

"The entertainment given on the 18th of April at Athletic Hall, for the benefit of the families of Policemen Boyer and Lucas, who were killed at the North Broad street railway crossing, netted $1 280.60. Officer George Clapp, of the 12th district, is deserving of much honor for the energetic part he took in this deserving benefit, he having cashed over 600 tickets. The orphans' prayers will shield him in many of the dangers that beset his duties as a faithful officer."

Mr. Editor: In your last issue you say 'it is surprising how quickly bakers' loaves shrink when the price of flour rises even the slightest.' But have you forgotten how handy it is for the baker to slip the bread through the keyhole when you don't want to get up early in the morning?

Happy is the mortal who reads advertisements as well as news; in fact, I sometimes find there is more news and wit in advertisements than in 'the news' itself. Let me give you a few samples clipped from one of our leading dailies:

"WANTED—15 White, Colored Girls for city, country. Call——." The advertiser certainly shows a profound knowledge of the art of enervating in the above instance. Though it is hard to tell white from black or black from white.

"A woman wants cooking; no objection to country." This woman ought to know, by this time, that Cannibalism is not fashionable either in town or country. If she "wants cooking," a trip to the Cannibal Islands would be just the thing for her.

"A woman wants washing. Not engaged on Monday." "Cleanliness is next to Godliness." This is a true saying; but if the advertiser is "not engaged on Monday," it must be that she washes the rest of the week. It does seem proper that she should 'take a rest' and give somebody else a chance at the soap and water, for there are other people who 'want washing' beside herself.

"An amiable child-nurse wishes a situation; competent to take entire charge and box the ears of the children with the greatest facility." The last eleven words I have added so as to express the meaning of the word "amiable."

"Any person can make an independent living." The advertiser is entitled to the thanks of the community for above information.

"Own Valuable Patent—Need Money, with services of active, good business man. Thousands in it. Address ——." Here, not only is the money of a "good business man" desired, but his "services" also. And all because the advertiser owns a "valuable patent." Thousands in it?" Of course there is—to get.

"A lady who has lost her baby will adopt one for reasonable compensation." Who can fathom the grief of this bereaved woman as she hugs somebody else's child to her breast and draws several dollars a week for doing so?

"Lost—Thursday, gray fox, liver and white flea-bitten setter dog, tail cut rather short. Liberal reward if returned to ——." Talk about cruelty to animals! Only think of this poor "liver and white flea-bitten setter dog" with his tail—not cut short, but worse!—cut rather short?" Ah! cut it short!

"Wanted—A First Class Drummer. Apply at ——."

"Hark to the sound of the rolling drum,"
The drummer with his cheek and goods doth come.

"McGowen—Roden.—On the 6th of February, 1877, by the Rev. Father Mulholland, Mr. Francis Jerry McGown to Miss Mary Roden. No cards, no cake, and nobody's business." "No cards, no cake, and nobody's business if" "'Nuff ced!"—that settles it for—

Yours truly, without cake,

MARCUTIO.

ED. "CARBON ADVOCATE."—In your issue of the "ADVOCATE" of the 5th inst. I read the following:

"NOTICE.—Notice is hereby given that Z. H. Long is no longer Agent for Tilghman Arner, Assignee of said Long. The said agency has been revoked and cancelled more than one year ago, and all persons indebted to Z. H. Long prior to April 8, 1876, must make payment to, and transact all business with the undersigned personally.

"May 5—13. TILGHMAN ARNER."

The above I consider is adding insult to injury, and I can only say that I have not been personally notified by the Hon. Tilghman Arner of the revocation of said agency, and that the first information I have ever received concerning it was in the "ADVOCATE" of May 5, 1877. Judge Arner has the right to revoke any agency which he has ever established, and I shall willingly adhere to his decision in this case, and I would also say that I am willing to adhere to the truth, and ask no more from him or anybody else.
