Letter from Mauch Chunk.

The prevailing strike still continues to be the all-absorbing topic of conversation, and the questions how and when it will end?

The excitement existing this forenoon is somewhat abating, all having evidently made up their minds to accept the situation with becoming grace.

Business here is almost at a complete stand, the only activity being in the line of necessities, which latter even are being purchased but sparingly.

Over in our sister borough much bickering exists concerning the appointment by the Town Council of an extra night police force of eight men, to which—whether from motives of economy or on account of sympathy with the strikers, it would be hard to tell—a certain element there are most strenuously opposed.

The coal trade is very much unsettled just now, but we hope and think we see a brighter future for it, as well as for all most other traffic.
