Prisoners Going to Siberia.

The saddest sight in Russia to a trav-eler is the manner in which civil prisoners are treated. It is a common spectacle to see 300 or 400 poor wretches on their way to Siberia under a military escort; for most of them are chained escort; for most of them are chained together in couples, while the women and children who have elected to share their bread winners' lot have to submit to be treated as criminals. Poorly clad, and apparently half starved, the wonder is that any of the party should ever survive the dreadful journey. A Russian criminal condemned to exile is sent away with very little ceremony; but when an officer of the army or other person of note has been sentenced to banishment for life, he is dressed in full banishmert for life, he is dressed in full uniform, and led to a scaffold in some public place. In the presence of the crowd he is made to kneel, while his epanlets and decorations are torn from his coat, and his sword broken over his head. He is declared legally dead, his head. He is declared legally dead, his estates are confiscated, and his wife can consider herself a widow if she so chooses. From the scaffold he starts on his journey for Siberia. His wife and children, sisters or mother, can follow or accompany him if they choose, but only on condition that they share his exite.

Mr. Arnold in his book collider.

Mr. Arnold, in his book entitled Through Persia by Caravan, relates how, when passing through Russia, he saw a party of prisoners embarked on board a steamer on the River Volga. They were positively caged amidships, so that every part of the interior could be seen, just as in the lion houses of zoological gardens, with this difference—that in the case of the prisoners there was no overhanging roof to prevent rain or supshine from pouring in upon their wretchedness. At the back of the cage there was a lair common to all, without distinction of sex or age. And when all were secured, including the guiltless all were secured, including the guiltless women and little children, several fights occurred for the places least exposed to the east wind. This is a system which must surely fade away beneath that public opinion which is fast becoming too strong for autocratic monarchs to despise; for we are told that the emancipation of the Russian serfs has made a vast legal, social and material improvement in the lower orders of the people, and it is to the people that the world will look for that much needed world will look for that much needed reform, which will enable Ru-sia, perhaps at no distant day, to take an honorable place among civilized nations.—Chamber's Journal.

English Jail Birds.

Except in romance it has never been satisfactorily demonstrated that there is honor among thieves; but unquestionably there is a greater amount of kindly feeling and good fellowship, especially among the younger sort—boys and youths of from 12 to 18. So far as may be judged, the captive himself does not more anxiously count the few remain-ing days and hours that as yet stand bteween himself and enancipation than do his staunch "pals" of the out-er world. So sure as the heavy door turns on its hinges to deliver him to the tender mercies of the world, does be see advancing toward him, with hand ex-tended and glad countenances, his been companious, who are generally glad to have him among them again, and are anxious to spend their present stock of ready money—realized possibly from the sale of stolen goods an hour or so before—in standing beer and something handsome for dinner in celebration of the joyous event. But the difference between the newly released young jail bird and his friends who have enjoyed the doubtful advantage of an unusually long spell of freedom! The former, whose term of incarceration has been perhaps six months, though unmistakperhaps six months, though unmistak-ably of the same breed as his compan-ions, is as different in appearance as brass in the dross and brass when it leaves the hands of the finisher. Clean and fresh complexioned is the young jall bird whose wings have been so recently clipped; his eyes are bright and clear, his skin glows with the fine of health, his hair, by nature scarcely less stubborn than his obdurate heart, has been temporarily tamed, and lies sleek and doule. But how is it with his young friends? The result of association with everything that is badbad food, bad lodging, bad drink, bad bad food, bad lodging, bad drink, bad company — is as plainly marked on every face as though scored there with a pencil. They are dirty, ragged beggars, and for all their make-believe of jollity, anxious and hungry looking. Their friend has been punished, the utmost severity of the law has overtaken him and he has felt the full weight of the classifications. its chastening hand; and the result is that his health is as much benefited as, perhaps even more than, if he had been sent to Brighton of Scarborough for a

It is more than probable that these young jail birds, who have been so for-tunate as to escape the fowler, would be averse to such an arrangement; but there can be no doubt that the very best thing that could happen to them would be for the next policeman they met to take them into custedy on sus-pleion, so that they might be delivered ever to jail authorities for a course of treatment similar to that which their friend has undergone. I have a very vivid recollection of being on one occasion on the prison premises when the van arrived, bringing among others a horribly dirty and neglected looking little wretch of about tweive years. An old thief, as the governor i aformed me; but from some cause or other he must lately have been terribly out of luck. His clothes were mere rags; his hair as disgusting to look at as that of an Aus-tralian bushman; his face pinched with cold and case and hunger. He might have been a younger brother of Jo of "lileak Houss" celebrity, but without the picturesquences which distinguished that young fellow's poverty, and with-out the industry which made Jo the owner of a crossing sweeping broom. It must not be imagined, however that the thief leaves jall with the hope and even the expectation of making his "holiday" a merry, though possibly a short one. There is an erroneous supposition among innocent folks that the "makings" of a London thief are something considerable enabling the rascal, while he is able to enjoy liberty, to live like the proverbial fighting cock. They, the innocent, peruse official reports, in which it is set forth with minutest detail how much money or money's worth by the rapacious army of rogues and robbers; the result being that each one must come into possession of several pounds weekly, enabling them to lead a life of riot and extravagance among their gay male and female companions. It would much amaze those who are misted to the above opinion, could they visit the localities where the main body visit the localities where the main body of the predatory army take up their quarters. There are certain streets, east, west, north and south of London, known to the police as being inhabited aimtst entirely by a class of persons who know the flavor of but two kinds of bread, that which is gained by plun-der, and that which is dealt out to them by the charitable.—London Society.
