H. V. MORTIMER, EDITOR

LEHIGHTON, PA.
SATURDAY MORNING, DECEMBER 13, 1877.

The California Assembly Thursday unanimously adopted a resolution previously passed by the Senate asking Congress to levy a per capita tax of $250 on Chinese immigrants.

The announcement is made from New York that the Assay Office in that city, Wednesday transferred fifteen tons of pure silver to the Mint in Philadelphia for subsidiary coinage.

A telegram from Washington states that the receiving teller of the Redemption Agency has prepared a list of counterfeit national bank notes, which will soon be issued. "It is so arranged that any one, without being a judge of money, can detect a counterfeit."

"Touch me Gently, Father Time," is the title of a new and beautiful song and chorus, by Charlie Baker, author of the famous "He Holds the Fort of Heaven." Dealers are ordering it by the thousand. The whole country will soon be singing "Touch me Gently Father Time." Any music dealer will mail this beautiful song for 40 cents. Published by F. W. HANCOCK, 50 West 4th St., Cincinnati, O.

In 1868, says the Harrisburg Patriot, Judge Gamble, of Williamsport, took out a policy of insurance for $10,000 with the Charter Oak life insurance company on the "with profits" plan, which fixed the annual premium at $650, less thirty per cent. annually and less sixty per cent. triennially. In 1873 the company demanded $650, the entire amount of the premiums, which the judge paid under protest and all subsequent payments were made under similar conditions. Up to this time $7,407.28 have been paid the company. Judge Gamble prays that the contract or policy shall be rescinded; that the company shall repay the sums paid, with interest; that the company shall be restrained by an injunction from claiming or collecting any sums of money under such contract, or from declaring it void. He recites that he believes the company bankrupt; that it has not kept its agreement and does not intend to do so. Judge Mayer, who is trying the case, has granted a preliminary injunction and fixed on Saturday, December 29, for hearing the argument.

Says the Philadelphia Ledger: On Monday there was received at the county prison a pardon for Edward L. Ford, a colored man, who, on May 12th, 1851, was convicted of having, in January of the same year, murdered his brother-in-law, Owen Cook, and who was sentenced to be hanged for the crime. The Governor at that time, Hon. William F. Johnston, went out of office without issuing a warrant for the execution, and the subsequent Governors have none of them taken action in the case, so that Ford has remained in prison for over 26 years, under sentence of death, and treated as a condemned man. He has been kept in close confinement, being allowed an hour a day in the corridor for exercise, and has, for some time past, been partially paralyzed in the right side. His pardon was recommended by the Prison Inspectors and passed upon favorably by the Board of Pardons at its last meeting. Ford has no friends who are willing to take charge of him, and he is now an old man, and the prison authorities are somewhat at a loss what to do with him, as they do not desire to turn him into the streets at the beginning of winter. The murder which Ford committed was done under the following circumstances: He ill treated his wife and on several occasions threatened her life. Cook, who was her brother, and a near neighbor of Ford—both the parties living near the Blue Bell, in Kingessing township—went to Ford's house to remonstrate with him on his behavior to his wife. While there the two men got into a fight, and Ford stabbed Cook with a butcher knife, killing him almost instantly.

Our Washington Letter.
WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 10.
The past week has been almost a perfect contrast to the week previous at this metropolis. For whereas during Thanksgiving week there was no sleep, except by snatches, and no time allowed for the usual attentions to turkey by the Senate, this has been dull and sleepy week as any that ever fell to the lot of Rip Van Winkle himself. The Senate has returned to its abnormal state of great and versatile dullness; the House has not had a single "field day," nor a solitary scintillation of the melancholy wit of Mr. Cox, and things have been uncommonly slow and stupid all round.

The only thing that has made any considerable sensation at all was
THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.
It being the first annual message of President Hayes, the document was read universally by this public, as it no doubt has been by the public of the country generally. It was received with almost unanimous favor here, as a document creditable in literary style and force of reasoning. Very many disagreed with some of the President's positions, of course, but all united in the judgment that it was a dignified, able and statesmanlike paper. No one asked "Who wrote it?" It is clearly belonged to R. Z. Hayes as the nose on his face. Whatever may be thought about him in general, it is plain that the President is a man of marked individuality; not a job or title less so than "Old Hickory" himself—nor is there any less determined will in Hayes than there was in Jackson; he has vastly more information, more intellectual training and discipline, more of the amenities of discussion, but not a particle less will force. In short, though our President is a mighty mild mannered gentleman, there is no doubt but that he is substantially made up of cast-steel? And this the country will fully understand before "the war on Hayes" is concluded, the wretched card war and the dead buried. Among the latter will not be found Rutherford B. Hayes.

One thing settled by the message, is the general character of our finances. We shall have resumption of specie payments, and we certainly shall not have the establishment of any greenback or silver theories. Mr. Hayes will veto any resumption-repeal bill or any measure making silver an unlimited legal tender. Our general finances will go on according to present legislation, and all men can make their calculations accordingly. Right or wrong, wise or unwise, this is the financial situation, and no power can change it short of that which can make the Ethiopian change his skin or the leopard his spots. I do not say that this is as it should be, but that it is as it will be. And being so, I say the country ought to know it, and govern itself accordingly. Practically, the President has closed the argument, decided the case, and overruled a motion for a new trial. Newspapers and statements may continue their debates, but they can amount to nothing. The President has them! Under the Constitution of the United States he is vested with the veto power, and they are not. And hence it will be exactly as I say.

Congress has determined to adjourn over from the 13th of this month till the 10th of January next. This is a long recess, which insures a long session of Congress, for the extra session accomplished absolutely nothing that ought not to have been done by the last regular session of the previous Congress. It did not even do all that it was convened in special session for. Hence the present session began as though nothing at all had been done, so we must necessarily have a long session, and one which, on account of the peculiar situation of parties, is likely to keep up considerable political excitement in the country. This is not a gratifying outlook to those who have an exalted idea of our present race of public men; but as those who have such exalted ideas are not numerous in the most intelligent districts, the mourners are not likely to obstruct the highways.

WASHINGTON SOCIETY.
The hard times have done much to dry up the fountains of Washington society. The gay and festive times of yore have fled. Where formerly there was not a night at this season of the year when a fellow didn't have to put himself into his swallow-tail coat, his white choker and his lavender kids, to attend from one to half a dozen "receptions" or other "society" arrangements, he has few or no calls of the kind now. The occupation of your Jenkinses, your Mrs. Grundies, and of your miscellaneous Dowagers of the high and mighty line of "Social Gals" is gone, and all would be glad to get the downfall of "society" is complete; and I for one hope it never be rehabilitated in the old fashion of expense, display, fearful extravagance and suspected corruption.

Letter from Mauch Chunk.
DECEMBER 12th, 1877.
As predicted in last week's issue, Rev. E. Ferris' lecture on Shakespeare's "Julius Caesar," attracted a large crowd to the lecture-room of the First Presbyterian church, on last Saturday evening, and is highly commended by all with whom I have conversed upon the subject.

The prospects of another combination has somewhat dispelled the gloom of the situation, and people view the near future of the coal trade more cheerfully. When, a little over a year ago, the combination then existing came to an end by (as was claimed) the action of the Lehigh Valley Railroad authorities, high hopes were at first entertained of the beneficial effects likely to result from its collapse. Unfortunately those hopes were not realized, and now everybody would welcome its resuscitation as joyfully as a year ago they had greeted its collapse. Taught by experience, they find that nothing but an arrangement of some sort, tending to concentration, can avert a common ruin, hence the general longing for a second combination. Well informed people predict the early consummation of the project, and already speculate on the influx of capital the measure is calculated to bring to the coal regions. The prevalent idea is that four dollars per ton for coal at tide-water would afford a fair margin to all concerned in the traffic, and it is not at all unlikely that the conductors of the latter-spirits in the new movement will be principally directed to such measures as will be most likely to produce so desirable a result. Pooling meets with little favor among operators, but I have yet to meet the first who objects to a curtailment of production. That, in case another compact should be carried out by the high contracting parties, I have no doubt, for if they have learned anything, they certainly know that common ruin would await all should the present system of over-production and cutting rates be adhered to. Indeed their only safety lies in concerted action and a faithful carrying out of any compact that may be entered into. United they may stand, but divided they must assuredly fall. On the whole I may say the prevailing feeling speaks well for the arrival at some definite understanding calculated to benefit the trade. That such may be the case is the wish of all. A few days, at most, will demonstrate what may be expected.

And so poor Fisher, the boss Molly cut-throat and whilom politician, who all along had consoled himself with the delusion that his great political influence would save him from the gallows, will have to die for all, the Governor's warrant to that effect having been received by Sheriff Raudenbush this evening. It will probably be read to-day. The day set for his execution is the 26th of February.

The successful placing of the stock of the new Lehighton Building and Loan Association encouraged our neighbors across the river so much, that they already talk of starting a third Building and Loan Association before the two now existing shall have run out. To judge from the character of the parties having the matter in charge, it may, perhaps, be a success.

Mr. John A. Esser, will soon leave Mauch Chunk to accept a position in the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Co.'s employ at Philadelphia.

The projected poor district of the lower end of the city, has been the subject of much discussion here, and if your people should give heed to the advice how to successfully carry out the project they can be recommended by applying to sundry parties, both here and in the upper section of the city, who claim to know more about conducting a poor house farm than anybody else. So if you had up for advice, don't fail to apply to them. I have also heard of several who are said to be very anxious to sell wild tracts in the jungles of Penn Forest land per acre, some of the Penn Forest land would, no doubt produce good crops when once under cultivation, but would it be desirable located? On the whole you'll do well to beware of jobs.

state; but having nothing to say in reply to Smith's accusations, his silence is regarded as ominous and already Pres. Gov. is considered as one who has lost even it still losing prestige. If Mr. Smith's allegations are well founded there may yet be more trouble in Reading railroad matters than one would now dream of.

"When rogues quarrel, just men get their dues," and if the import of all this will only be to establish the trade on a fair paying basis, no one will have cause to regret the wild schemes of the past.

Yours, etc. W. S.

Another Disgrace.
We clip the following from the columns of the Hazleton Daily Sentinel of last Saturday: Yesterday a disgraceful affair was tried before Esquire Roberts, in which Stephen Charles, of Beaver Brook, and Edward Lewis, of Andover, were defendants, and Mrs. Howells plaintiff. It appears that on Nov. 3d Mrs. Howells and her husband were in town and during the day Mr. H. became intoxicated so much as to incapacitate him for undertaking the task of walking home, and so Mrs. Howells started out alone quite late that night. On her way home, she was overtaken by the defendants above named, and on the way between this place and Jenneville, the men seized the woman, and by sheer force dragged her into the woods, where they perpetrated the nameless offense upon her, one holding her while the other outraged her, and vice versa. After having committed the crime, the men abandoned Mrs. Howells, who, bruised and torn, wandered her way slowly and wearily homeward. Mrs. Howells did not communicate the crime to any one directly, but waited for her husband's return, when warrants were issued and the guilty parties arrested. Meanwhile there had been a compromise attempted between the women (wives of the defendants and Mrs. Howells) but without success, and in the course of events, the case was tried before Squire Roberts, who, in view of all the evidence and facts as presented (which was conflicting and contradictory) gave a verdict of "assault and battery with an attempt to commit rape," and placed the guilty parties each under $750 bail. All parties interested were very desirous—for reasons well known and understood by themselves—to have the case set aside and there never, unless it was a crime and carried with it the ineffaceable stain of disgrace.

—Christmas is rapidly approaching.
—Wednesday was quite a pleasant day.
—Major Robert Klotz, of Mauch Chunk, was at this place on business on Tuesday last.

—One of our old weather prophets predicts that we shall have but very little snow this winter; however, how true this will be the future must show.
—Our Sabbath school will hold a Christmas festival. We trust that the citizens of this place, and especially the little folks thereof, will fully realize what it is to enjoy a merry Christmas. Childhood is indeed the happiest period of life, and when it is considered that the recollection of pleasant scenes of that period contribute largely to the happiness of old age, it is evident that we cannot do too much to please and delight little children, while our efforts are directed by prudence and good taste.

—R. F. Hafford, C. S., was at this place on Tuesday.
—Bears are unusually numerous this fall in Dauphin and Perry counties.
—The "National Steamboat Association of the United States" represents a capital of $500,000,000.
—A religious revival, with meetings every evening, has lasted four years in Columbia, Kentucky.
—A man in Louisiana married five times in eleven months, and swapped his last wife for a shot-gun.

—Extensive arrangements are being made in Washington for a baby show, which is to be held in that city some time in January.
—Life is but short, but we should do all we can to prolong it. Check a cough, and at once use an old reliable remedy such as Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup.
—The temperance folks of Yarmouth, N. S., a few days ago, attended a sale at the custom house, bought up all the liquor and emptied it into the sewers.
—More than 150,000 boxes of clothespins are annually shipped from this country to England, and great quantities to New Zealand, the Sandwich Islands, and Australia.

—The Moffat bell-punch, in use in Virginia barrooms, is a good collector of statistics for the temperance reformers. The Richmond bell-punches registered in seventeen days 25,000 drinks.
—The largest mass of gold yet discovered in Nevada was found near Osceola. It weighed twenty-four pounds and fifteen ounces, and it contained very little quartz, its coin value was not far from $4,000.
—The Philadelphia and Reading rolling mill, in Reading, is now engaged on the contract to manufacture 18,000 tons of rails for the new railroad in Brazil. The rails are to be finished within two years from the date of the contract.

—The German Colonization Society of Cincinnati has sent one of its members to Washington to join a delegation from Pittsburgh and Baltimore, to try to induce Congress to aid in the colonization by the societies of the west and South.
—Mr. Handin is the oldest Senator now serving—he is sixty-eight. Mr. Dorsey is the youngest; he entered the Senate when only thirty years old, and has served five years. Mr. Edmunds, who is forty-nine, is the Senator who looks the oldest.

—Parents cannot be too careful in guarding the health of their babies. Only a good and reliable medicine should be given to them. Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup is known not to contain anything injurious. Price 25 cents.
—An Auburn, Oregon, miner fitted out his boy with implements for mining. The boy turned some waste roadside water into sluices and began to wash earth. To everybody's surprise he panned out a few dollars' worth of gold and thereby attracted attention to a valuable lead.

—A Berlin paper says that Germany in 1880 will have a fleet which, although inferior in the number of vessels to those of either France or England, will be superior in the quality of material and artillery; in the education of officers, and in the completeness of its equipment. The construction of vessels proceeds rapidly.

—Hon. Adam Woolver, of this city, expressive in the Legislature from this city, representative and author of that novel book of reference, "The Treasury of Wisdom, Wit and Humor," is about to enter the lecture field with the following subjects: "Politics and Politicians," and "Party Spirit as an Element of Civilization."—Albion Democrat.
