MORE MOLLIEISM!

James McDonnell Charged with the Murder of Geo. K. Smith, in 1863, Arrested!

CHAS. SHARPE, FOR COMPLICITY IN THE SAME MURDER, ALSO LANGUISHING BEHIND THE BARS IN MAUCH CHUNK JAIL.

Particulars of the Murder!

MARCH CRICK, Dec. 26, 1877. Hardly has the late Molly excitement so much subsided, than new arrests promise to bring Mollie Maguire again to the fore.

For more than 13 years, the eventual unbarthing of this foulest of all murders was not as much a dream of, and probably never would have come to light had not sundry developments during the late Molly Maguire trials furnished a clue to the mystery enveloping the same.

For the information of those of our readers who may not be conversant with the facts in the case, I annex the following: Geo. K. Smith, then interested in the Yorktown colliery, had been to Mauch Chunk on the day preceding the assassination, and was so ill on his return home that he retired to bed, requesting that he be not disturbed by any one.

Before proceeding with the narrative, it may be proper here to state that this was in a very quiet and unexcited manner that Mr. Smith was arrested, and taken to the jail. Whether from a knowledge of the fact that he had enemies, it would, at present be hard to tell, but a cross dog owned by him, was kept about the premises, and a trusted employee named Ulrich, was requested to watch the house that night.

Before proceeding with the narrative, it may be proper here to state that this was in a very quiet and unexcited manner that Mr. Smith was arrested, and taken to the jail.

The Coal Trade.

Says the Philadelphia Ledger of Monday. A very excellent feeling, so far as we can judge, prevails the entire anthracite coal trade.

The coal business is no exception to this general truth. Indeed, as it is one that requires large capital to put in operation, and that loses largely if its machinery is allowed to fall into disuse, it is most important that it should be kept steadily in operation.
