The Horros at Plevna.

Mr. Mac Gahan's account of the condition of things at Plevns after the surrender presents a terrible picture. It is a scene of war as it was commonly known to all nations in ancient times, before the barbarian savagery had given way to the conception of the common brotherhood of human creatures, and also before the progress of medical science and the application of many inventions had rendered it possible to alleviate on a very large scale the miseries of men wounded in battle, or the untold wretchedness of those who fall into such pest houses as hospitals become in a beleaguered town, where there are no conceptions of sanitary needs. If we contrast wars as they are commonly known to the present generation of men with such war as is shown on the Vid-which is of the type of ancient warfare-we shall see at a giance how much has been done by the proper organization of the medical and surgical service and by such philanthropic movements as that of the society of the Red Cross. Save when a nation at large may be under the influence of some dominant passion—as France under the impulse of revenge-war in our time does not imply any animus in the combatants; consequently, the battle once over, the wounded soldier of one side passed his canteen generously to the maimed enemy near him; and not only do the Red Cross men, acting under the sanction of the public law of Europe, gather up alike all they find, but the proper ambulance service of any army when it has properly cared for its own wounded cares for the enemy's wounded as well. Moreover, in attendance to the mere point of the burial of the dead there is a great advance. Some of the greatest battle fields of our own war witnessed this change in a wonderful degree; for reinforcements that came up to relieve men en hardly contested lines never saw either dead or wounded, for the dead were buried almost as fast as they fell and the wounded were sent to the rear without delay. All the differences found in Plevns are due to the absence from the Ottoman mind of those conceptions of civilization that have so much ameliorated the conditions of the soldiers of other countries; they present final reasons for the abolition of a race that it is clearly impossible to civilize. In the awful scenes of the dogs and birds fighting over the bodies of the deed we get in the nineteenth century a glimpse of what was characteristic of all war in Homer's time. It was wrath then, as now, that hursed to Pinto's gloomy reign The souls of mights chiefs untimers slain; whose timbs, unbined on the naked share Devouring does and energy variances tore.

A Few Precepts From Confucius.

whole force of their affection." " Return equity and justice for evil done o you, and pay goodness by goodness." Without the virtue of humanity, one

" Think not of faults committed in the nost, when one has reformed his conduct." The Beauty of Nature.

I am never mere convinced of the progress I mankind than when I think of the sentinent developed in us by our intercourse with nature, and mark how it auguments and refines with our moral culture, and also (although this is not so generally admitted) with our scientific knowledge. We learn from ago to age to see the beauty of the world; or, what comes to the same thing, this beautiful creation of the sentiment of beauty is developing itself in us. Only reflect what regions lovely as Paradise there are over all Asia and Europe, and in every quarter of the globe, waiting to receive their fitting inhabitants-their counterparts in the conclous creature. The men who are now living there do not see the Eden that surrounds them. They lack the moral and in-Address: LOUIS BAGGER & CO., Soliesthree of Patents and Autorneys at Law, Le Droit a dog, in Allegheny county, George Jenkins shot at and, it is thought, fatally wounded a man named William Rhue. Jenkins at once gave himself up, claiming to have fired in self-defense. -The managers of the western penitentiary intend to ask an appropriation from the Legislature to enlarge the institution.

The present number of prisoners is about eight hundred, more than twice as many as can be properly accommodated. -Thomas Ridley, passenger engineer on the Pittsburg division, Pennsylvania rail-rond, has received a gold watch and chain worth $400 and a check for $100 from the board of directors, for his fidelity during the riots and his twenty-five years' faithful service in the employ of the company.

—John Rost, the treasurer of a German society at Marietta, has run away with $300 of the society's money. He left a note stating that it was not his fault that he appropriated the money, blaming the whole affair on Henry Swartz, who concocted the scheme, and who has accompanied him in the flight,

-John I. Smith, of Nineveh, engineer of the first train which came into Pittsburg after the riots, received a present of $200 from the Pennsylvania railroad company. Daniel Williams, of Greensburg, who was conductor of the same train, was also presented with $150 and each member of the crew got $50. -Rev. Thomas Colleson, who was bern on August, 19, 1776, preached a sermon in Chester, Delaware county, on Sunday even-
