friends paid their respects to her; and, as the friends of the General were strangers Mrs. Hayes had the conservatories lighted, to show them through. The effect is very fine when the large conservatory is lighted : especially now, when the azaleas are a mass of bloom. It was only last December that gan was introduced into this part of the White House, and the burners are so arrarged as to form a beautiful crescent of fire high above the growing plants and flowers. Jay Gould, the well-known financier and and ex-Erie Railroad magnate, is still in the city. The Arlington Hotel has been for years, the headquarters of the milroad for years, the headquarters of the railroad lobby, the component parts of which, headed by Jay Gould, may be seen there any creating. Corcoran, the well-known banker, philanthrophist, and owner of the hotel, is going to extend it; and, necording to the plans now in preparation, it will be the hargest, as well as one of the finest, hotels in Washington. It was not until yesterday, during the de-bate in the House of Representatives on a report to pay the employees in the cloak-room their wages, that the fact was devel-oped that the two barbers who perform the tomorial ornamentation of our Solons in Con-gress use paid by the government, and not oped that the two barbers who perform the bonsorial erramentation of our Solonsin Con-gress are paid by the government, and not by the members individually who call their services into request. This seems to be rather hard on the bald members, who must forego the pleasure of having their hair cut at government expense. It is, however, not a bal idea to have a governmental abaver, to trim the whiskers and wax the mous-taches of our law-givers; and, now when I come to think of it, that accounts rationally for the curious fact that all the two hundred and soventy-odd members, wear their hair (that is, such its have it) exactly after the amer cut, so that yeu can tell a member by the cut of his bair, as you can tell a manof-war from the cut of its jib. The two bar-bers referred to are twins, and operate ton-sorially precisely after. Some of those who visited the Centennial Exposition at Philadelphia will remember the great government. "Cutannial Memo-rial," a sheet of parelineant fifty-two inches in length by thirty-seven wide, gorgoously framed, when way exhibited in the Gov-ernment Building, and also, on the 4th of July, 1876, in a big sub opposite graind stund in Independence Square, as a part of the omnermal expresses. It is surrounded by an emblematic border, and crowned by a vignetic of States in the shape of an eagle grapping in its talons a shield, arrows, liber-vignetic of States in the shape of an eagle grapping in its talons a shield, arrows, her-vignetic of States in the shape of an eagle grapping in its talons a shield, arrows, her-vignetic of States in the shape of an eagle grapping in its talons a shield, arrows, her-vignetic of States in the shape of an eagle grapping in its talons a shield, arrows, her-y constitution, "cach side of the group in a stand of colors, the whole resting on a representation of Flynomith rock in-the word "Constitution," each side of the group in a stand of eslore, the whole rosting on a representation of Plymouth rock in-scribed, "1776-1876," with the motto E Pluribus Union, The background is a storm scene, with lighting pluying from the clouds. The rest of the border is made up of fagots, typifying the original thirteen States, bound with a band of stars, gather-ing in the upper corners by olive and oak branches, signifying peace and strength. At each of the base comers is a shield, par-tially surrounded by clusters of olive and oak leaves. This curicois document derives its interest and imperiance from the fact that upon its face are the official signatures of the executive, judicial, and legislative, officers of the government, in all numbering 401, headed by U.S. Grant. The groat send of the United States was affixed to it, in pursuance of an aist approved January IR, B78, and, for the purpose of making it ac-cessible to the general public, this docu-ment, which bears the tiff of "The Admin-istration of the United States Government at the Beginning of Its Second Century." the House has passed a resolution to the of-fect that a committee of thirteen, consisting of one from the thirteen original States re-spectively, be appointed to arrange the pro-coedings and ceremonizes for the placing of the said centumial memerial in the Depart-ment of State.
