From the County Sent. The Kinsarese Ainese.—The street of officer Wm. Kelly, of Wilkes-Barre, on Friday night of last week, has continued to excite attention since. The Moon's Eclipse. The celipse of the moon was well up to time Monday evening, but there was a want of appreciation of that fact among the general public. An event which casts such a shadow might reasonably have been looked forward Integration to be added as a set of the set obstruction to anything at all. Among the celestial bodies there was perfect order, and there was no reason to complain of our own planet in any particular. The stars were all planet in any particular. The stars were all absent from the grand lunar demonstrations, with a single exception, but this particular star that did appear shone beautifully, and seemed as if it were in its place in the heavens for some guardian purpose. The splender of the moon as it emerged little by little from the dark mantling in which it seemed to be enveloped was incomparable. Its brightness in the increasing crescents which appeared was of richest red color, al-most fiery at times in the clow with which most fiery at times in the glow with which it broke from the surrounding darkness. As the luminary appeared to the unscientific eye clouds passed over it again and again,
