THE VETO.

President Huyes has votoed the Army Appropriation bill, because Congress in granting money for the support of the army has provided that the troops shall not be used at elections. The provision which is President Lincoln to take charge of the thus vetoed is wise, necessary, indispensible, and cannot safely be abandoned. It should be insisted upon. For Congress to retreat from the position which it has assumed, would be foolish, unpatriotic, ridiculous, and probably fatal to those responsible for the retreat. It is sound to fool and the soun the reitreat. It is vain in this country for the minority to attempt to rule the majority. The many cannot be coerced by the few. The very foundation of the government is more, early in the month of April. It would have had far more force if it had omitted three f urths of its contents. The first half, besides the State House of Representatives, and was the State House of Representatives, and was being very faulty in its reasoning, is entire-ly unnecessary to the making out of his case, and one-half of the remainder rather where he was subsequently a member of the weakens the fourth and concluding part, which is quite strong and directed to the main point. The message recites a number of sections of the Revised Statutes which is are intended to prevent military interfer-ence at elections, and arguing that these are quite sufficient in that direction, infers that there is, therefore, no necessity for the fur-ther prevention contained in the sixth sec-tion of the Army bill. But few disciplined minds will be able to perceive any force in that logic. Every precation within the limits of the Constitution should be pro-vided against army interference with elec-tions, and the fact that some such are pro-vided is no argument why others should weakens the fourth and concluding part, Topeka Constitutional Convention, serving as the first Secretary of State under that organization, and as a Brigadier-General under the Robinson government; was elected in 1859 Treasurer of Carbon county; enter ed the Union Army in 1861 and served vided is no argument why others should & Rand Powder Company at New York ; not be, if the unguirded points present open-ings and temptations to unscruppions par-tisans, either in the army offices or the Exe-cutive department of the Government, in imes of high political excitement. To that extent his ac-tion must be coerced; and in that lies the vital objection to such methods of legislation. The arguments on this point occupies the concluding perion of the message, and it is stated with considerable force. But even this, strong as it is, will hardly receive the consideration it is entitled to now, becau of the faulty reasoning which precedes it in the unnecessary portion of the message al-ready pointed out, and because of the addi-tional fact that the President, in order to ready pointed out, and because of the addi-tional fact that the President, in order to bring it into the memsge, resorts to the rath-er unnecessary and unusual expedient approximation between the sources of the addi-tional fact that the president, in order to bring it into the memsge, resorts to the rath-er unnecessary and unusual expedient approximation between the sources of the addi-nusting from speeches of members of Con-gress.
