THE KAISERBLUMEN. Have you heard of the Kaiserblume.

That grows in the fields of Germany, Light waving among the wheat? 'Tis only a simple flower, But were I to try all day, its grace and charm and beauty I couldn't begin to say.

By field and wood and roadside, Delicate, hardy and bold, It blossoms in wild profusion In every color but gold. The children love it dearly, And with dancing feet they go To seek it with song and laughter;

And all the people know That the Emperor's daughter loved it Like any peasant maid; and, when she died, ner father, Stern Kaiser Wilhelm, said

This flower my darling cherished, Honored and growned shall be-Henceforth 't is the Kaiserblume, The flower of Germany." Then he bade his soldiers wear it, Tied in a gay cockade, And the quaint and humble blossom His royal token made.

Said little Hans to Gretchen

One aummer morning fair, As they played in the fields together, And sang in the fragrant air : O look at the Kaiserblumen That grow in the grass so thick ! Let's gather our arms full, Gretchen And take to the Emperor, quick ! For never were any so beautiful.

So blue and so white and red !" to all they could carry they gathered. And thought of the princess dead. Then under the blasing sunshine They trudged o'er the long white road That led to the Kaiser's palace With their brightly nodding load. But long ere the streets of the city

As hot they grew and as tired As their corn-flowers bright and sweet And Gretchen's cheeks were rosy Wi h a weary travel stain, And her tangled hair o'er her blue, blue eyes, Feil down in a golden rain.

And at last all the nodding blossoms Their shining heads hung down— But "Cheer up, Gretchen!" cried little Hans "We've almost reached the town ! We'll knock at the door of the palace, And won't he be glad to see all the princess's flowers we've brought him! Think, Gretchen, how pleased he'll be !"

So they plodded patiently onward, And with hands so soft and small They knocked at the palace portal And sweetly did cry and call : Please open the door, O Katser We've brought some flowers for you, Our arms full of Kaiserblumen,

All rosy and white and blue ?" But nobody heeded or answered, 'Til at last a soldler grand Bade the weary wanderers leave the gate, With a gruff and stern command But "No I" cried the children weeping;

" We must come in I' they said. A lofty and splendid presence The echoing stairs came down; To know the king there was no need That he should wear a crown. And the children eried : "O Kaiser, We have brought you flowers so tar !

Though trembling and sore afraid.

And clasping their faded flowers,

And we are so tired and hungry ! See, Emperor, here they are !" They held up their withered posies. While in a the Emperor, s face A beautiful right came stealing And he stooped with a stately grace Taking the ruined blossoms,

He comforted with kindness

And that was a wonderful glory That little ones befell!

And when their heads are heary, They still will the story tell, How they sat at the Kalser's table, And dined with princes and kings, In that far-off day of splendor

The heart of each trembling child.

And home, when the sun was setting, The happy twain were sent, In a gleaming golden carriage With horses magnificent, And like the wildest vision Of Fairy-land it seemed : Hardly could Hans and Gretchen Filled full of marvellous things!

Believe they had not dreamed. And even their children's children Enger to hear will be, How they carried to Kaiser Wilhelm The flowers of Germany,
