THE STORY OF A MARRIAGE-EVE.

BY EARL CARL.

Roy flung himself back into the chair, and she covered his face, while his slender graceful frame quivered under the strain of silent emotion.

"What makes you think that Martha Wilmet's exposure of your conduct to Viola's father will have so calamitous a result?"

"You are Martha Wilmet," she said. "You are the quiet, earnest, earnest."

"I can't tell you that," she said. "I can't tell you that."

"You are Martha Wilmet," she said. "You are the quiet, earnest, earnest."

"I can't tell you that," she said. "I can't tell you that."

"You are Martha Wilmet," she said. "You are the quiet, earnest, earnest."

"I can't tell you that," she said. "I can't tell you that."

That woman to-night upbraided him with the truth; that he supposed his. He kept silent because he would not believe her accusation till he had seen the facts.

Viola and Roy were married the next day.

Martha never credited Mark Sinclair's story, but Mr. Clayton did. Mark did not appear at the wedding.

Mr. Clayton died about six months afterward of the disease by which he had been a long time a sufferer.

Viola was the honored friend and frequent guest of Viola and Roy, though the former never knew of his noble success.

Viola was never succeeded in finding Mark that wife whom she had hoped to secure for him.

But perhaps Mark had his reward. Perhaps his own large, true soul has gained for him a fitting recompense.

What a noble nature was wrought in this finer way.

TREATMENT OF WITNESSES.

The manner in which attorneys question witnesses is exasperating to the intelligent listener, beyond expression.

"You say that the prisoner was chopping a tree down. Now, will you please tell the court and jury where he bought the axe?"

"Oh! I certainly not." "The court said the jury will please observe the stubbornness of this witness. It is manifestly his purpose to keep from the jury the facts they ought to know."

"Now, sir, who owned that mill?" "The witness innocently inquires: 'What mill?' but soon repeats it: 'The mill which was owned by the deceased.'"

"The witness tells his name." "Now, sir, look at the jury! How long did you live there?"

"Lived where?" and the attorney springs to his feet.

"May it please the court and jury, I find this witness utterly incorrigible, stubborn, untruthful, and bent upon keeping back the very facts the jury must have. He has clearly been tampered with, and comes here with the manifest intention of brow-beating and swaying both the jury and the bar."

"The witness tells his name." "Now, sir, look at the jury! How long did you live there?"

"Lived where?" and the attorney springs to his feet.
