Pruit Trees.

The New York Trilone says; For the down. healthy and perfect germination of seeds, heat, moisture, air, and the exclusion of light, are all required. The seeds of apple, pear bounts of sola at the moment of driving the and plane trees are usually sown in November, but they will show no sighs of germination until the warmth of spring reaches there. Seeds planted too deeply do not grow. The depth of the covering should be regulated by the size of the seed. Small and delicate seeds may be sown almost on the surface, while large ones may be imbedded to the depth of four or five inches. The small seed requires but little moisture, and has but a feeble force to penetrate a covering, while the large one requires more moisture and has force enough to push its way up.
