These stories are inresting, but in general of a kind inappropriate to accompany an obituary notice When Mr. Chandler was last in Washing ton he presented such an appearance of robust health that one would scarcely have placed the duration of his life at less than a core of years. He was as stalwart in body as in his politics, and few men have ever set in Congress who possessed such a powerful physique. Mr. Chandler performed un insuse amount of campaign service this rea on, commencing as far back as the 23d of July, when he made a very elaborate speech at Madison, Wis., the occasion being the elebration of the 25th anniversary of the organization of the Republican party in that State, Mr. Chandler was then fresh from the extra session of Congress, and burning with zeal in the issues which had been made up between the two great parties. His speech was printed as a campaign document to the extent of hundreds of thousands by the Wisconsin Republican Committee and was scattered broadcast over the West. Shortly afterwards Mr. Chandler came East,
