That is a losing policy that has been conclusive in its teachings in the recent past, the Solt, Daniel and Eve. folly of which will not be repeated. All that is requisite to the end of obtaining remunerative prices, or that has been requisite to that end, is action upon an egreedupon line of policy, based upon reasonable and equitable terms and conditions. That such an understanding has been come to by the trade is now full assured. There is be Boyed to be no excess on hand, except, perhaps, of one or two sizes of domestic coals : and of those not of any such amount as need nterrupt trade by a general suspention for however short a time. But there is a feeling abroad as to coal, carried over from tast year, that probably the present mutual agreement among the several controlling companies may not hold throughout the entire year, and hence dealers and consumers withhold their orders. This we have endeavored to show from the present condition of the trade, compared with the trade last year to the same time and the trade of the previous Sav years, is scarcely possible.
