

ARMERS' COLUMN.

—Falselyhood not only disagrees with truth, but usually quarrel among themselves.

—It is a strange thing in art that an artist never learns to paint before he can draw!

Woud't that my friend good health enjoy Every day have some time empty Secours respite from sickness, ill.

—Some one inquires: "Where have all the ladies' bells gone?" Gone to wait long ago.

—The glazier who was cheated out of his pay complained that he got only his trouble for his pains.

—Sensible married men always depend on their better halves when they want to change their quarters.

—No man knows what a day may bring fifth," was the way a colored preacher in Missouri put it.

—The only people who never sign themselves "Your obedient servant," are the servants themselves.

—Ten-tasters in New York get as high as $100 per month, but milk-tasters get nothing but chalk and water.

—Until men have learned industry, economy, and self control, they cannot be safely entrusted with wealth.

—The women caught in a shower with her new bonnet and no umbrella can never be persuaded that the rain was needed.

—The Coffin family of this country are to have a reunion; which is as much as to say that we are nearing the resurrection.

—He had a keen appreciation of the fitness of things, who said "men are geese, women ducks, and birds of a feather flock together."

—If Ben Franklin had given any advise to printers it would probably have been "Stick to your stick and your stick will stick to you."

—There are two kinds of oranges grown in this country, one is the kind that is good to eat, and the other is the kind that is sold on railway trains.

—Nothing could be more natural or proper either, when a defaulting clerk fails to keep his accounts right, then to send him to the house of correction.

—An antiquarian has discovered that the reason why the ancients took the owl for an emblem of wisdom was because he saved his talk and filled his stomach.

—It is said that the growth anywhere of the poisonous rank red fungus or mushroom known in botany as Agaricus Muscarius, marks the spot where gold can be found.

—The young man who failed to take advantage of wasted opportunities, and is sorry for it now, did not have courage to put an arm around his girl when out buggy riding.

—Beecher has coined a new phrase—"heavenly drunkenness"—which he applies to a person who has "too much religion." Mr. Beecher himself is not that kind of drunkard.

—"Do you play eucher?" the sad passenger asked the man from Whitehall. "No," replied the man, "I only know two cards in the deck, the jack of queens and the spade of diamonds." They didn't play.

—How curious it is that in cemeteries we may find a huge white monument weighing hundreds of pounds on the grave of some deceased mortal, and then read the inscription on the stone, "May the earth rest lightly upon him."

—It is strange how the sudden opening of a parlor door will send two people to the end of a sofa and set them to counting the figures in the carpet. There must be something powerful in the draft to blow human beings around in that way.

—If he puts his arms around her like a bear and stops her breath when he kisses her, they are not married, but are likely to be.

—If he puts his hands on her shoulder, leans forward a little, snatches the prize and falls back, they have been married two weeks.

—If he comes up with his hands in his pockets, looks out of the window, says, "Well, good bye," gives her a tasteless snack and rushes off, they have been married two years and life is a desert.
