The act that last your the wholesale price o oal was less in the fall than earlier in the ear does not establish the practicing upor it as a safe policy. The present active de mand for coal at the highest prices of the year is a caution to buy now; the season for he largest use of first life but just comenced, and if it should become unusually old earlier than usual a further materia advance in prices may follow all through the winter, when those found shortest of supply, according to their demand, will suffer most, for it is fairly to be afficipated that those who have coal to sell will exact the most for it that they can get, just as consumers, when they in like circumstance Republicans this (Saturday) evening. had the producers of coal in a corner pressed for lowest prices, even when they

Time order this law nakes all inequalities of trade equal. No one either has just cause of complaint against its operation, for all recognize its practice. Retail prices in the East and West have been advanced, and Boston dealers put up prices last Wednesday from 25 to 75 cents a ton net in the yard. For the rest of the month the outlook is favorable-so favorable that there is danger of an increase of prices, which would be disadvantageous to the trade now that it is in a better condition than at any time since 1875. We do not greater than ever. consider that the advance since then is due to a grasping monopoly, as some of the press are beginning to talk of. It is due to a return to reason on the part of the managers of the anthrucite coal trade, and this return was only brought about by the financially ruinous results of the insane policy pursued during the past two or three years.
