A CURIOUS DISEASE.

Under the name of narcolepsy M. Gelicau describes, in the British Medical Joural, a rare form of neurosis, characterized by an irresistible desire to sleep, sudden in its onset, lasting but a short time, and occurring at more or less prolonged intervals. This neurosis has some analogies with romnolenes and catalepsy. It was described for the first time, in 1862, by Dr. Chase, who referred it to a serious and passive congestion of the meninges and of the brain. The persons suffering from it fall asleep any moment; their sleep lasts for a few moments, and they then recover their consciousness. The patient whose case is reported by M. Galingan fell asleep this way four or five times dur ing his dinner, letting his knile and fork fall, and breaking off in the middle of a sentence
