GOOD-FELLOWSHIP.

A pilgrim once, upon his way, Grew weary at the close of day, And feeling his eyelids creep, Dropped down upon the mossy ground.

At last, in restfulness profound, But as he rose and onward trod, He noticed that a single spot, On which his footstep fell, Exhaled a most delicious smell.

Said he: "What magic spell is here To enrich the atmosphere? No common earth is this, I know, To sweeten, by its overflow, So broad a space beneath the sky, And perfume all who pass by it!"

The broken earth in simple trust, Replied: "I am not worthless dust; But once a rose out of my breast, Show forth its loveliness confessed— And so my consecrated mold Was by another's worth controlled."

"Tis so with men, who fall or rise, Often by kindred ministries; And they do not downward slip, They owe to good companionship, And show forth its loveliness confessed— And so my consecrated mold Was by another's worth controlled."

From the Persian, by Joel Benton.

LIFE AND LOVE. Life is a garden fair and free, But 'tis love that holds the golden key, For hand and heart.

Once held apart, Life's flowers are dashed with storm of sorrow, And bloom to-day may be blight to-morrow; Then heedless ever of wind and weather, Let life and love be linked together.

Life is a diamond rich and rare, But love is a luster that dances there; For hand and heart.

Life's jewels grow dim in the breath of sorrow And diamond to-day may be dust to-morrow, Then heedless of the wind and weather, Let life and love be linked together.

Life hath a fair and sunshine face But love is a beauty that gives it grace, For hand and heart.

Once held apart, Life's jewels grow dim in the breath of sorrow And diamond to-day may be dust to-morrow, Then heedless of the wind and weather, Let life and love be linked together.
