The Cont Trade.

The anthracite coal trade during the part ure. There is a good supply of cost and a fair demand for most of the domestic sizes. Coal is being distributed freely, so freely, in fact, that the stock on hand is steadily diminishing, though the amount, with the current production, is such as to dispel all apprehension of a short stock and supply. As yet it has not been determined when the 19 nine days' suspension of mining in the Cannot get out month of December will commence. If while the prices were confessedly low, even Whole No. in attendance, Males ....... 40 if the coming winter should prove a mild one. Coal is a necessity, a supply of which cannot be ignored. And when the price is low in warm weather it is the part of wisdom to then lay it in, and is about the only 63 sure protection against inconvenience, high prices and suffering from the chances of a 88 long and unduly cold winter. While there producers of coal have the market pretty much in their own control. The mines and the mining forces are in condition to produce yery large amounts of coal, and the ransportation companies pretty well equipped for the prompt putting of it in market Another favorable consideration, the price of coal has not been suffered to fell so low as not to furnish a stimulant to the liberal putting of it in market. While coal is no so dear as to cause unusual complaint there at on the part of consumers, it is enough to satisfy producers for the cost of production-The only complaint in the trade that is not just now readily met is a general and wide spread scarcity of coal cars, and what is worse, the outlook for a necessary replenishment is not as good as could be desired The coal trade have now the opportunity of proving to their customers, the consumers tures they are sometimes represented to be They will not halt in production, nor will they, as we believe, unreasonably advance prices beyond a fair paying return, although the fault of the situation is of their custon ers' own making. Navigation has closed and at a date in November scarcely ever be fore so early. The scarcity of cars happening at about the same time, may have a tendency to check the free distribution of coal, and, with the less amiably disposed, any inconvenience and short supply that may result may be attributed to a wilful purpose on the part of those controlling the trade. The demand for cars is most press ing on the far western lines, from which new tetritory is annually more and more widely opened every year to hard coal. The railway officials may probably be unable to see any way out of their difficulty except to put up freight rates to higher figures; but we hope not. Mr. Franklin B. Gewen, president of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad Company, sails for Europe on Wednesday of this week. Parties here engaged in the coal trade have decided not to advance the prices of coal during the month of De-cember.—Ledger, Monday.
