“The Anxious Bench,”
A Synopsis of a Sermon, preached on Saturday evening, February 13, 1881, in the Westport Reformed Church, by Rev. J. E. FERRISS, pastor of the Church and member of the East-Pennsylvania Classis of the Reformed Church.

Why are we here? Why are you here? Why am I here? What kind of thoughts have you in your heads? Some, undoubtedly, have come out of curiosity, to hear what I may have to say, and to hear the news across the way to the other (Evangelical) church. I see some are prepared with paper and pen to take notes. Write away to your heart's content! It is, however, not my intention to preach to you; I will more especially preach to the members of my own church. They need it! Some of our members have left us, and gone to the anxious bench in the church across the way.

Why is there so much disorder in churches making use of the bench, and why is there no order in other churches? The bench is the cause of it—there is disorder in the bench and therefore there is disorder in the entire house. There is a perfect babel, I have not come here to scold. What I say, I say to my own members—I have never preached against them. You will not be angry with me while I read most of my discourses to-night; you are not accustomed to hear me read sermons.

Why is it that at the anxious bench the spirit only manifests himself during the singing and the praying, and not during the preaching of the word of God? The Spirit of God operates upon the hearts of the people only through the preaching of the word, and never through singing and prayer. See Romans x, 17 and 18.

Why is it that the spirit never manifests himself in the prayer and the singing, but only in the preaching of the word of God? The spirit of God operates upon the hearts of the people only through the preaching of the word, and never through singing and prayer.

Why is it that these people must always be near together in their services, in order to receive what they call the baptism of the spirit? Man possesses certain magnetic powers, which, when they are mutually operative in a body of people will magnetize the whole assemblage and bring about just such phenomena as is noticeable at an anxious bench.

4.—SUPERSTITIONS.
“I should think his ears would burn,” is a common remark when a person is made the subject of a continual conversation, and “so many stiches you take upon you, so many lies will be told about you,” is frequently quoted when a rent is hastily sewn upon without changing the torn garment.

It is a strange case that a horse voluntarily adopts a human habit, and that a human being voluntarily assumes a horse's habit. There are numerous instances of this kind.
