Denver's Dandellons.

To-day two ladies and a gentleman strangers, evidently, walked up 16th street, and when they reached Dr. Bancroft's residence one of the ladies stopped, exclaiming out, the dear dandelions ! Oh, I'm so glad they grow in Colorado." "I wish I could get some to curl as I used o when a girl;" added the second lady. "Wait; see if I can't reach one; I'd like to nake a horn out of the stalk-as I did when was a boy," said the gentleman, stretching imself over the fence in an unsuccessful atempt to prey on the doctor's domain.

They admired the profusion of bright beauies, whose yellow faces gladden the lawn, for for a long time, and then walked on, regreting their inability to play among them as they had played in childhood.

Those same dandellons have a history These flowers are not indigenous to Colorado. About four years ago Dr. Bancroft picked up a fragment of an old newspaper and Tooth, Ear and Headache, Frosted there saw dandelton seed advertised for sale Remembering that he had not seen any of the flowers in Colorado, he sent for some of the seed, which was sown in his yard. The plant grew, prospered and became as prolific as is its wont. The light down bore the seed into neighbors' lawns, and now for three or four blocks surrounding his residence, every yard is beautified by this brilliant, early beauty; and still is spreads, sea son by season, without leaving a basis for a guess as to bow far it will spread.
