

WATER FOR LIVE STOOK.

As the soluble nutritive materials ar taken up from the intestinal canal by the vessels that prefern this function, a fresh draft is made upon the blood by the diges tive organs for the elaboration of their pe culiar secretions, so that a rapid interchange pounds the principal secretions and excreions may be estimated as follows :

Lbs. in 24 hours. Saliva (dry food) Gastric Secretions....... Exhalation from the Lungs......

... 302 50 Total From this it would appear that nearly one third of the weight of the body is separated from the blood in the form of scere tions required in preparing the food for the process of nutrition, and in excretions of waste materials that are of no further use i the system. From this enumeration of some of the leading activities of the animal con omy, it must be seen that the amount of work preformed by the internal organs of the body is not inconsiderable, even when the animal is apparently at rest, and that a supply of water to maintain the equilibrium of these fluids and keep them in proper proportion to the denser tissues is of great imortance. - Dr. Mu.as, in American Agriculturist for February.

TIM BUNKER ON LEARNING FROM MIS-TAKES.
We have been a good many years learning what crows were made for, and the lesson is not very well understood. This year we are likely to get additional light. The spring was wet in Hookertown, and better prospects for grass were never beld out. The prop was good, but after it was gathered the grub of the May-bug began to show the re sults of its depredations, both in the pas tures and in the meadows. My attention was called to them by the flocks of crows in the big pasture, and the abjoining fields. 1 did not suppose there were so many crows in the neighborhood. They frequent the shore in winter, coming long distances to feed upon the clam banks, when food is scarce elsewhere. But their favorite diet in immer seems to be the worms that come from the May-bug. They have great skill in detecting the presence of this grub, and if the crows were protected in their period of incubation, they would become so numer-ous as to exterminate these pests, or to reduce their numbers so much that they would do no serious damage. In some of my fields the grass roots are destroyed in large patches. so that you can serape off the stubble with a rake. There can be no good crop of hay until these places are re seeded. For several generations war has been waged upon the crow, because he pulled corn out in the retired fields on the edges of woodland. Town and State have put bounties upon him, and he has been hunted at all stages of the year to get the bounty money. The boys have sought out his nesting place, climbed tall trees, and cleaned his nest of the callow young. Men have put a dead carenss back of the barn to entice him within gun shot, and be has been treated as a deadly enemy. He has been branded with a bad name, and "scareerow" has been applied to all those non descript contrivances that disfigure cornfields to keep off the birds. Still he windicates his right to be, and the response which Nature makes to this unreasoning warfare is, "Protect the crow or do worse." A few hills of errn in the spring time is small damage compared to the grass crop of a whole farm destroyed by grabs. On the whole, the wiseseres at the State capital make poor work at mending the legislation of the Almighty. Take care of the crows, and the crows will take care of your grubs, -TIM BUNKER, in American Agriculturist for February.

PREPARING PEACH STONES.

Several have asked how to prepare peach stones for planting. They are probably aware, that when the slones are kept dry all winter and then planted in spring, very few, if any, will germinate. In nurseries, the stones are not allowed to get very dry, but they are stratified or beided just before winter sets in. The usual manner is, to mark out the limits of the bed and arread the atones over it to the depth of two or three inches; the stones are then spaded in as if turning under a dressing of manure By this operation they are distributed through and well-mixed with the soil, where they are are left to freeze and thaw all winter. This treatment causes the halves of the stone to separate and the pressure within of the swelling seed can push them apart This may be effected by other methods than that efspuding in. The stones are some. times spread upon the ground and covered with spent tan-bark or sawdust to the depth of three to five inches, and thus exposed to the weather. In spring, when the ground is ready to plent, the stones that have been paded in are separated by throwing the soil of the bed upon a riddle, such as is used by mazons; the earth falls through while the stones are left upon the roddle. Those the have been under tan or sawdust are more easily recovered at planting time. - Ameri can Agriculturist for February.
