THE VILLAGE BLACKSMITH. BT H. W. LONGPELLOW. Under the spreading chestnut tree

The village smithy stands; The smith, a mighty man is he, With large and sinewy hands; And the muscles of his brawny arms Are strong as iron bands. His hair is crisp, and black, and long,

His face is like the tan; His brow is wet with honest sweat, He carns whate'er be can, And looks the whole world in the face, For he owes not any man. Week in, week out, from morn till night You can hear his bellows blow;

You can hear him swing his heavy sledg With measured beat and slow, Like a sexton ringing the village bell, When the evening sun is low, And children coming home from school Look in at the open door;

They love to see the flaming forge, And hear the bellows rour, And catch the burning sparks that fly Lake chaff from a threshing floor. He goes on Sunday to the church,

And sits among his boye; He hears the parson pray and preach, He hears his daughter's voice, Singing in the village choir, And it makes his heart rejoice. It sounds to him like the mother's voice,

Singing in Paradise; He needs must think of her once more, How in the grave she ties; And with his hard, rough hand he wiper A tear out of his eyes. Tailing-rejoining-sorrowing.

Euch evening sees it close ; Something attempted, something done. Has carned a night's repose. Thanks, thanks to thee,my worthy friend For the lesson thou hast taught ! Thus at the flaming forge of life
