EVENTIDE BY JULIA C. B. DORR.

Whenever, with reverent footsteps, I pass through the mystic door, Of memory's stately palace, Where dwell the days of yore, One smile, like a lovely vision, Comes to me o'er and o'er.

It seemed the pupil, and gave lessons in drawing and painting, and soon went to his study. She became a general favorite, too, for she had a pleasant way of speaking to the children...

FALSE OR TRUE?

"Only a home; I ask nothing more, Miss Burton; but I must have a home or die. I will be maid, seamstress, anything you wish, for a home."

When Jeannette Burton was sixteen (she was almost thirty-seven now), she was a vision of beauty seldom seen; those calm, powerful brow and eyes and classical features made her pre-eminently glorious.

It seemed the pupil, and gave lessons in drawing and painting, and soon went to his study. She became a general favorite, too, for she had a pleasant way of speaking to the children...

When he met the girl he seemed nervous, and his face pale as he looked into the bright eyes and took one little hand.

It was a dark, stormy night in November, the third month of Jeannette's stay at Barton Hill. They had been sitting in the library, Jeannette apart from the others, painting on a head of the watch dog, Hero, and Capt. Wiltmore and Miss Barton talking easily, and a little confidentially...

"You painted?" "Yes, Jeannette found voice to reply. "You are false to me, to all! Now take this vile thing and leave my home! You are to wait for nothing—go immediately!"
