LIQUID PEARL

Administering Drugs to Dogs and Pigs.

The following is the satest method of giving medicine to dogs in a liquid form : tie he mouth, and have him held firmly. Then draw out the cheek, which acts as a fuoue, and pour down the fluid. If he denches his teeth so as to exclude the liquid out a bit of wood between them. In giving belus or hall, one person should hold the og between his knees, the hinder part restog on the floor. Another person then forces en the mouth by pressing the forefinger and thumb of the left hand upon the lips of the upper jaw, and with the right thrus the ball far enough back toward the ani unl's gullet to insure its ready passage to

FARMERS' COLUMN.

To prevent disgust and sickness,nauseou addicines should be enveloped in thin pa per or in a thin flour wafer. Whenever possible, the necessary medicine should be intro lused into the food of the pig. If this is impossible, small pigs may be drenched by seiging them by both ears, placing them between the legs, and lifting it a few inches fron the ground. The medicine, previously mixed, is gradually poured into the mouth from an iron spoon by another person, the elevation of the head causing the mixture to pass backwards, and thus be awallowed. For large pigs, the operator can hold the head firmly between his knees, while an assistant secures the hinder por ions. The first, lifting the head a ltitle, urn it somewhat to the right, separate he lips on the right side, when he an pour the contents of the horn or bottle into the angle of the mout's. Or again the animal may be secured by a running noose to a post, and then be drenched by a single person.-Dr. D. Slade, in American

What is a Breed !

Dr. B. D. Hulsted answers the above queson as follows in the American Agricul

When any kind of farm animals has acmired certain characteristics through a series of generations, and they have become a irmly fixed as to be transmitted to the offpring, with a great degree of certaintuch animals taken collectively constitute breed. The time that it has taken to derelop and impress these bree I characteristies has been very long in some instances, vhile other breeds have sprung up in a few enerations. The work of establishing a g wid breed is a difficult one, and demands averal sterling qualities in the breeder. He seds to have an ideal animal in his mind ward which all his efforts tend. In other vords he must have a clear concep ion of ill the good points desired in his animals, and also must be keen to see any bad ones hat are to be eliminated. He needs not only to be able to see desirable qualities, but se able to develop them, and this calls for a knowledge that is peculiar, and a judgment that is uncommon. Without tie-e qualities a breeder may be carried away by beauty of form or a charming color, to the neglect of deeper-scated and vastly more important quantus. The breeder who hopes to produce an animal that is the best for everying, his started on the wrong track, and the content of the c I man. The qualities that aid a horse in vinnuig a hurdle race are not in combination with those that make an animal of the Trains.
