THE BOYS.

"The boys are coming home to-morrow."

This our rural hostess said:

While Lou and I exchanged quick glances,

Full of mingled fear and dread.

Had we hither come for quiet,

Little had the city's noise,

But to change it for the riot

Of those horrid country boys?

Waking one with loud hallooing

Early every summer's day,

Shooting robins, teasing kittens,

Frightening the wren's away.

I wrote these lines on happy summer:

—Today, I smile to read them o'er,

Remembering how with anxious faces

We watched all day the opening door.

The came, "the boys," six feet in stature,

Gracious, easy, polished men;

I vowed to Lou, behind my knitting,

To trust no mother's word again.

For lo! in a thing immortal,

As each fond mother will agree;

And some are "boys" to her forever,

Change as they may to you and me.

New by the window, still and sunny,

Warned by the rich October glow,

The dear old lady waits and watches

Just as she waited years ago.

For Lou and I are now her daughters,—

We married "those two country boys,"

In spite of all our sad forebodings

About their awkward ways and noise.

Lou springs up to meet a footfall,

I sit no more for coming feet;

Mother and I are a winged legion,

For steps on Benul's golden street.

But when she blesses Lou's beloved,

And seals it with a tender kiss,

I know that loving words go upward,

Words to another world than this.

Always she speaks in gentle fashion

About "my boys," she always will;

Though one is gray, and one has vanished

Beyond the reach of time or ill.

A COUNTRY PARSON

BY HELEN FOREST GRAVES.

If Miss Matty Rice had yawned once

since breakfast, she had yawned a score of times; and even pretty Eveleen was growing drowsy over her embroidery by the window. For it was a hopelessly rainy day in mid-October, with the sky veiled in dark gray mist, the tinted leaves floating down into matted layers of dim color around the columns of the plaza, and the tall dahlias nearly prostrated by the steady down-pour. No walks, no gathering of ferns, mosses, berries, in the still, delicate woods; no

dreamy rambles to the mountain-tops—

and, worst and saddest of all, nothing to read.

"And I won't be deluded into working crochets," said Matty, "nor yet into needle and Kensington stitch. Eveleen was in that delightful little book that papa was reading aloud out of last night?"

"Do you mean the 'Recreations of a Country Parson?" said Eveleen, comparing two shades of rose-colored wool.

"If that's the name of it—yes."

"He took it to the city with him,"

said Eveleen. "I saw it sticking out of his coat-pocket, when he was running for the train."

"How provoking!" sighed Matty, clasping her dimpled hands above her head;

"when it's the book of all books that I should like to read on a day like this."

"Mr. Winton has a copy of it," said

Eveleen, threading a worsted-needle with the very darkest shade of garnet.

"But what good will that do me?" said

Matty, disconsolately.

"Borrow it," suggested Eveleen. "Ev-
