THE SEA-MAIDEN.

There was a lily and rose sea-maiden

In marvelous depths of far-away seas,

Whose eyes were blue, and whose head was

And

With luminous curls like the honey of bees.

Half hidden by corals and swaying rushes

And vines of the ocean, she sat arrayed

In a tremulous web of delicate blazes

And robes of quivering light and shade.

The sun-fish came to worship her grace,

The dog-fish lingered and marvelled beside,

And she gaily smiled in their whimsical faces,

And sang them songs till they laughed or cried.

A poet of earth looked down upon her,

And loved, and beckoned, and told his love;

But her soul was coy with a sea-maiden's

honor,

And she would not go to the world above

So there he stayed by the crystalline water;

He had hoped to gaze with heart on fire;

And died at last for the ocean's daughter—

Died of sorrow and long desire.

And still she sits in the peace of ocean—

The peace of the mouth of ocean-caves—

A jewel without an earthly emotion,

Who cares not for men, their loves, nor
