Hiring Men.-The problem of hand la or is not an easy one for the farmer. Or any farm where two or more hired mer are needed during the growing season, it is usually best to have one man work by the year. In this way good help may be secured for a long term of years, and will also lead to a profitable planning of the labor for the riole year. The amount of work done dur ing the winter can be largely increased. greatly to the relief of the workmen n the busy months of spring. The neces sary wood for the household should be proelded in winter, with a sufficient stock on hand, so that only well seasoned fuel need be used. It is a slipshod and unprofitable nethod that provides the wood fresh from the log on the day it is burned, besides being a trutt ut source of but breaklists and worse tempers. There are scores of other obs that may be done in winter, turning oth man and team to good secount.

Fences that have been laid by the winter orms should be rebuilt as soon as the round will permit. The colo frame is simply a but-bed frame and sash placed over a spot of good soil. It receives its heat from the sun by day, and this is prevented from escaping at night, by cover ing the glass with shutters, straw mats, or even a piece of old curpeting. The soil of the cold frame should be about three mehe agher than the general surface, and the frame should be where it will be sheltered rom cold winds and will receive the fulsurnith of the sun. This, having no heatng material, will not force as rapid a growth, t will be found very useful to start some tals of plants, and to receive those that ove been started in a hot bed. - Am.
